Berlin Talks 'Proceeding Satisfactorily'

Wagner Act Resurrection Smothered By House

Wood Labor Bill, T-H Substitute of Coalition, Now Being Sweetened

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Administration's move to replace the Taft-Hartley Act with a management-labor relations act of its own suffered a setback yesterday.

Republicans and Southern Democrats twice beat down Administration attempts to shut off House debate, and after four days of discussion, get down to decisive voting.

At the same time, the House overwhelmingly rejected revival of the old Wagner Management Labor Relations Act—which was succeeded by the Taft-Hartley Act in 1947—and then went on to "sweeten up" the Wood bill, which is a modified version of the Taft-Hartley Act sponsored by the GOP and anti-Administration Southern Democrats.

With Improvements

The Administration wants to replace the Taft-Hartley Act with an "improved" model of the Wagner Act. This model, under the name of the Lesinski bill, restores the Wagner Act with several "improvements" urged by President Truman.

Before the House can get around to voting on the Lesinski bill, it must first take up the Wood bill, which the coalition has, in effect, proposed as a substitute for the Lesinski bill.

According to its sponsors, the Wood bill contains at least 12 changes from the Taft-Hartley Act which are concessions to organized labor. But the Administration and the union leaders insist the Wood bill, while containing certain "softening up" clauses, also includes a number of new "gimmicks" and "monkey wrenches" which make the Wood bill "worse" than Taft-Hartley.

Two Views of Strategy

Strategy of the coalition leaders calls for "sweetening up" the Wood bill with further amendments relaxing the restrictions on union activities, in order to get a fairer law on management-labor relations, according to its supporters; in order to attract more votes, according to its opponents.

After the House had adopted one "sweetening up" amendment to the Wood bill, Representative Augustine B. Kelley (D., Pa.), leading the floor fight for the Administration's Lesinski bill, arose at 2:45 p. m. and moved that all amendments and debate on the Wood bill be closed at 4:15 p. m. Kelley was defeated on the division vote 201-119.

Forty minutes later—with a second "sweetener" added to the Wood bill—Representative Kelley again sought to limit debate, this

President Due For Wait to Get April Pay Check

President Truman's April pay check—or at least the full $12,500 due him for the month—will be late if Congress fails to pass the first deficiency appropriation bill today, at the latest. And neither house is in session today.

The reasons:

Mr. Truman on January 20 got a raise from $75,000 a year straight salary to $100,000 salary plus a $50,000 expense allowance, lifting his monthly check from $6250 to $12,500.

Funds to pay at the old rate were provided long ago. It will take passage of the pending bill, however, to put up the $33,437.52 raise Mr. Truman is supposed to get for the January 20-June 30 period.

Durocher Ousted Indefinitely For Altercation With Fan

FRED BOYSEN
Accuses Durocher

LEO DUROCHER
Denies attack

Cincinnati, April 29 (AP).—"Lippy" Leo Durocher, the bad boy of baseball, was suspended again today as a result of an altercation with a fan at the Polo Grounds yesterday.

This time Durocher, who sat out the 1947 season with a year's suspension, was waved out of action indefinitely.

Commissioner A. B. Chandler dropped the bomb on the New York Giants' manager and ordered him to come to Cincinnati Tuesday to tell his story.

Immediately appointed by Durocher to handle the Giants in his absence was Frankie Frisch, former Pittsburgh pilot who traveled with the Giants last year as a sportscaster.

Reports vary as to what happened to Fred Boysen, a Brooklyn fan after the Dodgers walloped the Giants, 15 to 2. Boysen, who was released from a hospital today, said Durocher approached him from behind, knocked him down and kicked him in the stomach.

Durocher said he is innocent.

"The commissioner is making a complete investigation of the case," Walter Mulbry, secretary of baseball, said in announcing Leo's suspension.

Bendix Strike May Close Hudson Plant

Detroit, April 29 (AP).—A crippling supplier strike threatened today to shut down a fourth major automobile industry "independent."

Hudson Motor Car Co. said it was "about to close" because of a continuing strike at the Bendix Aviation Corp. at South Bend, Ind. Bendix is the industry's principal supplier of brakes.

A Hudson shutdown would idle an additional 25,000 workers and boost the Bendix-induced strike total to nearly 60,000.

It also would leave only Studebaker and Willys-Overland of the main independents still in production. Studebaker said today its operations were not threatened by the Bendix strike.

Protest to Truman

General Motors and Ford have removed their dies from the struck Bendix plant and Chrysler has other sources of supply.

Hudson, calling its plight to the attention of President Truman and congressional leaders, said it had been discriminated against by the CIO United Auto Workers.

Despite a court order, it said, it has not been permitted by the UAW to remove its dies from Bendix as have other companies.

Ford, unaffected by the brake supply situation, had its troubles on another front.

A work stoppage hit its big Rouge plant as a delegation of international UAW leaders went there to investigate local union charges of production speed-ups. The union said it was caused by a "misunderstanding" on the part of 275 workers directly involved.

1500 Sent Home

As a result, the company shut down its Ford final assembly line and sent home 1500 workers until Monday.

Raymond H. Tyree, 54, secretary-treasurer of the Stanford Paper Co., was hurt fatally here yesterday in a two-car crash involving a hit-and-run driver.

A short time after the accident, police arrested James R. Abernathy, 24, of 1126 Park rd. nw., as the hit-and-run driver.

He was held for the action of the coroner and charged with manslaughter, driving at an unreasonable speed, failing to yield the right of way, leaving after colliding and driving without a District permit.

The crash occurred about 5:20 p. m. at 12th and W sts. nw. Tyree died at Garfield Hospital of a crushed skull at 6:25 p. m.

Police said Tyree was driving west on W st. As he drove through the intersection of 12th st., police said, the second automobile, going north on 12th st., struck the rear of Tyree's car.

Tyree was thrown from his car and his head struck the north curb of W st.

Witnesses told police the youth driving the second car abandoned his automobile and fled.

However, Pvt. Remy Ducote, attached to the Accident Investigation Unit, finally identified the driver as Abernathy, police said.

Abernathy, who was recently graduated from Howard University with a law degree, was not at his home but Ducote trailed him to 5219 E. Capitol st., where he arrested him.

Business associates of Tyree said he had been an official of the Stanford Paper Co., 25 Massachusetts ave. nw., for about 15 years.

He had been a District resident 25 years, they said. He lived with his mother at 1500 Crittenden st. nw.

Palliative, Says Sparkman

Sanitation Crackdown Called Best Immediate Slum Cure

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The National Home Builders Association yesterday told Congress that stricter enforcement of sanitation ordinances was the best immediate cure for Washington slum conditions.

In doing so, the group took a leaf out of Baltimore's book.

Baltimore two years ago set up a special housing court to enforce penalties against both landlord and tenant.

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), chairman of the Senate Banking Subcommittee on Housing, said the homebuilders' approach was "no more than a temporary palliative."

"A person would be in terrible error to think that enforcement of health regulations was the complete answer to Washington's shattered frame buildings," Sparkman added.

The Home Builders Association, which strongly opposed the pending public housing and slum clearance bill, presented its case by showing the Sparkman subcommittee sound pictures of the slum rehabilitation program in Baltimore.

Sparkman said that "in my book, more housing is the only real answer to the Capital's terrible slum situation."

"My idea is to start a public housing program here immediately," said the Senator, adding that he already had called upon National Capital Housing Authority for a cost estimate of razing the city's worst living quarters and building additional public housing.

Sparkman also gave hope to the now fundless District Redevelopment Land Agency—the city's long-range slum clearance authority—which is now seeking an amendment to permit it to share in the loans and grants under the housing bill.

He said such an amendment would be approved in conference

He said he was still anxious to get an early start on his plan for a $20,000 Banking Committee study of Washington's housing problem to serve as a "testing ground" for the Nation.

Four spokesmen for the builders' group later reshowed their

Secrets Loss Miffed Judy, Ex-Boss Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Judith Coplon, who laughs frequently at her espionage trial in District Court, was pictured yesterday by her former boss as being "disgruntled" last winter when she was relieved of part of her Department of Justice work.

She was told then to stop handling FBI internal security reports dealing with such matters as Communist and Soviet activities.

William E. Foley, section chief in the Department of Justice, testified that this work was taken away from Miss Coplon after a superior had told him that she was "running around" with Valentin A. Gubitchev, 32-year-old Russian engineer.

"Pouted" Over Slight

He said that she protested the change as a "slight" and went around "pouting."

Miss Coplon and Gubitchev were arrested in New York a month or so later, and charged with conspiracy to commit espionage. Thereafter, Miss Coplon was indicted separately here on a charge of taking and copying FBI intelligence reports to help Russia, a charge on which she is now being tried.

Mrs. Ruth M. Rosson, a Department of Justice lawyer, followed Foley to the stand yesterday, and testified that Miss Coplon had asked her in mid-February for FBI intelligence reports on foreign embassies and legations, especially those dealing with Russia.

Sent 50 or 60 Reports

She said at one point she sent her "50 or 60" such reports.

This was after Miss Coplon had been relieved of the task of handling internal security reports. Mrs. Rosson had been transferred to the department's internal security section for the specific purpose of screening the reports.

Foley had explained earlier that he was chief of both the internal security section and the foreign agents registration section. Miss Coplon was employed as a political analyst in the foreign agents registration section.

Archibald Palmer, peppery defense attorneys, asked Foley if he had told Prosecutor Raymond P. Whearty that he felt "sorry" for Miss Coplon.

"I may have," said Foley.

"Do you feel sorry for her now?" Palmer asked.

Pities Her Now

"I pity her," said Foley.

"Suppose she's a victim," said Palmer. "Do you pity her?"

"I pity any victim," said Foley.

Miss Coplon, to judge from her conduct in the courtroom, did not share Foley's sentiments of pity. As on other days, she brought her hand up to her lips several times to hide her laughter. This came

Red Armies May Not Hit At Shanghai

Shanghai, April 29 (AP).—Chinese Communist forces evidently were concentrating tonight on an effort to trap Nationalist armies southeast of Nanking rather than aiming directly at nervous Shanghai.

(The Communist radio asserted the "major part" of seven Nationalist armies already had been trapped roughly 80 miles south of Nanking and was being "annihilated." It said more than 40,000 government soldiers already had been captured.

(Seven armies would be 140,000 or more men. They were identified by the Communist radio as the Fifty-first, Fourth, Twenty-eighth, Forty-fifth, Ninety-ninth, Sixty-sixth and Twentieth Armies.

(The Red broadcast, heard in San Francisco by the Associated Press, asserted the trap was closed when Communist troops captured a line of towns on a 120-mile arc stretching east and south from Wuhu, 50 miles southwest of Nanking, through Langki and Kwangteh to Wuhing.)

The Shanghai garrison's latest announcement conceded that Communists had taken Wuhing, 36 miles east of Kashing and 40 miles north of Hangchow.

It said the Communists were about 35 miles west of Shanghai in the vicinity of Kunshan.

The Communists seemed in no hurry to press faster or harder along the direct route eastward to Shanghai. Nor did they seem to have met any serious opposition.

The Reds appeared more anxious to reach Hangchow, 121 miles by rail southwest of Shanghai.

Shanghai remained outwardly calm about the war but visibly worried about money.

The money situation was a nightmare. The government "gold" yuan was three million to one United States dollar—compared with 1,500,000 the day before.

Employers figured they would need about two trillion gold yuan to meet month-end payrolls. They haven't got it, as the printing presses cannot keep up with the inflation.

The British sloop Black Swan again sailed down the Whangpoo and joined British and American ships in the Yangtze estuary, leaving the river front at Shanghai empty of foreign warships.

Vice Admiral Oscar C. Badger, United States Western Pacific commander, issued a statement that United States Navy forces would be retained in the Yangtze about 10 miles from Shanghai as long as needed to stand by "in the safe evacuation of American nationals from Shanghai."

Bill Allots $35,000,000

Senate Votes Aid to States For School Children's Health

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

By a unanimous voice vote, the Senate yesterday passed a bill allotting 35 million dollars a year in Federal funds for the health of all the Nation's schoolchildren.

With no opposition, the measure passed after less than an hour's debate.

Major purpose of the bill is to aid the States in providing regular medical and dental examinations for all children from 5 to 17 years old in public, private and parochial schools.

The bill specifies that such examinations and services must be made available to children "without regard to race, creed, color or nationality," if the State is to qualify for Federal aid.

Funds would be allotted to the States on the basis of their financial need and the number of their school children.

Contributions would have to be made by the States, with the poorer States contributing one-fourth the amount granted by the Federal Government and the richer States contributing up to the amount of the Federal grant.

The District of Columbia, for example, could receive $75,011 from the Federal Government but it would have to match that grant with $75,011.

Under the terms of the measure as passed by the Senate, the Federal Security Administrator would be in charge of the distribution of funds. He would be responsible for the certification of the funds which would be paid in quarterly installments through the Secretary of the Treasury.

Payments would be made to the treasurer or corresponding official of the State.

States desiring to qualify for receiving funds under the bill must take legislative action to accept the provisions of the act and submit a plan governing its administration to the Federal Security Administrator.

The report of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, headed by Chairman Elbert Thomas (D., Utah), stated that about three-fourths of the States now provide some physical examinations for school children but that many are "grossly inadequate."

The committee cited Selective Service figures on rejections for service in World War II—5 million men or 30 per cent of the total examined—to show the need for early detection and treatment of defects.

From various sources the committee compiled figures to show that there are more than 4 million children with visual defects, 1 million with hearing defects, 500,000 with orthopedic and plastic defects, 500,000 with rheumatic fever and 200,000 with epilepsy.

Before passing the measure, the Senate adopted three minor amendments. One, by Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), would provide that no State plan could be disapproved because the State exempted from its application children whose parents are unwilling on account of their religious beliefs to have their children included in such a program.

Another, by Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.), provides that school health services shall use qualified personnel as well as facilities already established in the State.

A second Saltonstall amendment provides that school health services shall utilize, if no State law forbids, the services of the family physician.

Interrupted Confiscation

3 British Policemen Seized In Berlin, Taken to Red Zone

Berlin, (Saturday) April 30 (AP).—A new incident early today troubled British-Russian relations here a few hours after apparent settlement of their controversy over control of Berlin's canals.

A British military government official disclosed that three British military policemen were seized and taken into the Russian zone from Berlin yesterday.

The official said the policemen were attempting to save British horses from a German farm where livestock was being confiscated by what appeared to be Soviet zone police.

Negotiations for the return of the three men were begun immediately.

Yesterday Soviet headquarters notified the British that Russian officers who tried to seize control of barge traffic in British sector canals had acted without authority.

British and Soviet transport chiefs arranged a conference today on the question of barge traffic. That seemed to end the blockade-within-a-blockade controversy that flared Wednesday. The British appeared to have won their point and canal traffic moved normally.

In the new row, German police had reported that 50 armed Communists had raided a city-owned farm in the British sector and made off with 34 cows and 36 horses.

The marauders were dressed in the uniform of the Soviet sector Peoples' Police. The farm is near the Russian sector border.

Police said the band snipped telephone wires and cowed workmen around the farm while they loaded the cattle and horses onto the trucks, then drove away rapidly into the Russian sector.

The approach of May Day Sunday caused some tension in the city. Rival celebrations are planned in eastern and western Berlin. German police reserves were ordered on alert status for the day.

Several hundred young Germans engaged in a swirling fist fight near the United States-Soviet border today. Communist youths said they were holding a pre-May Day rally and anti-Communists attacked to break it up.

NCPPC Ends Race Designations

Recreation Board Gets Choice On Playground Segregation

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The District Recreation Board yesterday was given the power to end or continue segregation on Washington playgrounds.

The power was handed it by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which announced it is removing all racial designations from its recreation system map. The Recreation Board has been guided by this map.

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, commission chairman, said that in his opinion, the move "does not mean an end to segregation" on local playgrounds. It does make it an administrative matter, for decision by the agency which operates the playgrounds, he said.

Wording of Resolution

The formal resolution of the commission stated:

"Whereas the National Capital Park and Planning Commission is not required by any act of Congress to make or to maintain racial distinction in its plans or maps; nor is such determination a part of its function.

"Therefore, it is moved that the Commission revise its Recreation System map by eliminating all racial designations'"

The subject of racial designations came up in yesterday's commission meeting when General Grant presented a lengthy correspondence he had with Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.), in which Klein had demanded that the racial designation be abolished.

General Grant declined to state what the commission discussed before it reached its decision.

Klein Lauds Action

He declared:

"The commission never did fix a policy. I told Representative Klein on the subject of segregation that the commission is charged by the 1926 Act with making a comprehensive, consistent and coordinated plan for parks and playgrounds . . . It made that plan consistent with the situation as it existed at that time as to playgrounds and schools."

Representative Klein said last night that the commission's de-

Grant Lists 6 Development Plan Hurdles

Six major obstacles to execution of the comprehensive plan for development of Washington were outlined last night by Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Speaking before a group of Washington and Philadelphia members of the American Institute of Architects, General Grant called the division of jurisdiction "Obstacle No. 1."

He emphasized that planning commissions have only advisory powers, and added that the District Commissioners and Federal agencies, as well as suburban authorities occasionally exercise their authority inconsistently with sound planning principles."

Other major obstacles he discussed are:

2. Pressure to break down sound zoning, to prevent desirable changes and to postpone density limitations.

"The zoning map and zoning regulations are too often changed to satisfy selfish demands, contrary to the best interests of the community. The tendency is pronounced in Washington . . . to build up artificial land values . . . to give some favored individuals . . . an unearned increment of value at the expense of the community," General Grant said.

3. Public appeal of the grandiose.

"Because it is good publicity to have something tried out in Washington, we are too frequently confronted with beautifully prepared reports recommending extrava-

Pilkerton: 'I Forgot'

Đ. C. Funds 'Watchdog' Ready To Pay Off $65 Tax Lag Lien

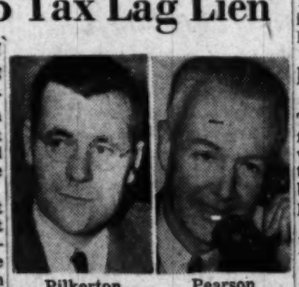
Arthur R. Pilkerton, District of Columbia auditor and "watchdog of the treasury," yesterday prepared to write a check to satisfy a $65.09 tax judgment growing out of his failure to pay the second half of his 1947 District income taxes.

Pilkerton, $10,000-a-year District executive, ruefully explained that he owed the taxes through "oversight." He further said that he understood the filing of a tax lien in District Court yesterday was a "mistake," due in part to his desire to make sure that he paid the tax penalty for his "oversight."

The tax lien was filed by the office of Guy W. Pearson, District collector of taxes, whose office is one floor below Pilkerton's in the District Building.

Pilkerton said he owed $129.55 in 1947 income taxes. On March 30, he paid $67.53 in cash, including penalty, for the first half. He said he then received notice that he owed $64.77 for the second half. Pilkerton said it was evident that the sum did not include the full penalty.

Pilkerton then asked Pearson to revise the total. He told a reporter that Pearson agreed to return the bill, but failed to do so before the lien was filed.



Pilkerton

Pearson

The auditor said the lien was a surprise to him.

"Frankly, I forgot about paying for the second half," he said. "I certainly did not intend to avoid payment. I will send in a check tonight or slip it under Pearson's door."

Samuel J. Kidd, head of the Delinquent Tax Section, said the form letter giving notice of delinquency does not mention the tax lien possibility. The lien against Pilkerton will be released when the check is received, Kidd said.

Western Powers Confer

New York, April 29 (U.P.).—An American spokesman announced tonight that talks between the United States and Russia on the lifting of the Berlin blockade are "proceeding satisfactorily."

Porter McKeever, spokesman for the United States delegation to the United Nations, said there would be no authorized report on the substance or subject matter of the latest talk on Berlin and Germany held this afternoon between United States Ambassador-at-large Philip C. Jessup and Jacob A. Malik, Soviet delegate to the U. N.

Jessup and Malik conferred for more than 2½ hours in Malik's office on Park Avenue.

Jessup consulted later with Sir Alexander Cadogan of Britain and Jean Chauvel of France at Cadogan's hotel.

All four will communicate the substance of today's talks to their home governments.

Although Malik had been expected to give official assurance that Russia would lift the blockade in return for the western powers lifting the counterblockade of Berlin and consenting to a council of foreign ministers meeting on German questions, there was no official hint that any agreement had been reached today.

Observers expected Jessup and Malik to continue their series of "informal exchanges."

Talks May Continue

McKeever read the following statement:

"No authorized report on the substance or subject matter of the conversations between Dr. Jessup and Mr. Malik has been released.

"The important objective has been to preserve the informal and exploratory character of these conversations so that their progress would not be jeopardized.

"We have been trying to emphasize their exploratory character in order to dispel the impression that there has been a definite proposal to be accepted or rejected.

Truman Doubles Funds Request For D. C. Sesqui

President Truman yesterday appealed to Congress to double his earlier request for $1,500,000 to carry out Washington's Sesquicentennial celebration next summer.

Two weeks ago the House, although approving establishment of a Sesquicentennial Commission, omitted a fund of $1,500,000 to permit advance planning. The Senate Appropriations Committee has not yet considered the matter.

Yesterday's revised request of three million dollars was submitted to the Senate by the Bureau of the Budget. The bureau acted for the President after he had received another appeal from Sesquicentennial Commission members in a White House visit April 15. The commission had originally asked for three million dollares.

Senators Debate Education Aid Bill

Terming the public school teacher "the Vanishing American," Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.) yesterday urged the Senate to support the 300-million-dollars-a-year Federal aid to education bill.

The measure would give grants-in-aid to the States on a sliding scale with wealthier States getting $5 per school child a year, and the poorest States receiving up to $25 a child annually.

Opening debate on the bill, Hill warned that "a breakdown is threatened at the very time the schools are called on to meet new and greater responsibilities."

Lodge Offers Amendment

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.) opened a drive to amend the bill by appropriating aid equally to all States on the basis of $10 yearly per student attending tax-supported elementary and secondary schools.

Lodge told the Senate the Massachusetts people are 'sick and tired" of seeing States like Texas get a "much larger slice of Federal pie."

Talking for more than two hours to a nearly empty chamber, Lodge attacked the bill's formu a for distribution on the basis of the annual incomes of each State's residents. He singled out Texas and Oklahoma specially as among the really "rich" States which under the measure would receive large apportionments for education.

Texas a "Horrible Example"

Lodge's mention of Texas brought tall, lanky Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) hurrying to the floor. Drawled the Texan, "I thought the Senator was using Texas as a horrible example."

Freshman Senator Paul Douglas (D., Ill.), already one of the Senate's most skillful peacemakers, interposed that the Senator from Massachusetts had had nothing but praise for Texas.

Of the Nation's treatment of its school teachers, Hill said, "we have never given them the recognition, the appreciation and the financial rewards they deserve. In three fourths of the States teachers' minimum salaries are still below $2000 a year even for teachers with four years of college preparation.

"Janitors and charwomen in public buildings are paid more. There have been some pay increases. But the teachers are no better off financially than they were in 1941. The average salaries paid teachers today buy no more food and clothing and shelter—allow no more for additional study or recreation—than the average salary of $1470 a year paid teachers in 1941."

Springfield, Mass., April 29 (AP).—The Russian "cold" has moved into the English language.

Out of the Soviet, too, the editors said, have come such words as "Cominform" and "party line."

Britain's Winston Churchill is credited with "Iron Curtain."

There are some 15,000 new words or new meanings for old words in the new Collegiate, Editor Hubert Kelsey reported.

AFL, CIO Plan New World Labor Group

By The Associated Press

The AFL and CIO have teamed up, it was reported yesterday, to help form a new worldwide labor organization to rival the Soviet-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU).

Accord between the two big United States groups was reached at a secret meeting of leaders here, according to officials of both. This ended the long-standing refusal of the AFL to share the spotlight with the CIO abroad.

The CIO had been a member of the WFTU, which it helped to found in 1945 with Russian and British trade unions. But the AFL had declined to go into the WFTU for two big reasons: the federation leaders feared that Russia would try to dominate the WFTU and they didn't want to concede any place to the CIO.

With the British and Dutch, the CIO walked out of the WFTU, leaving that organization to be controlled by the Russians, with 28 million members.

Michael Ross, the CIO's international affairs director, said the CIO and AFL would be on an "equal footing" in the proposed new organization.

The AFL would pay a higher tax, however, because it has 7½ million members compared to 6 million for the CIO.

But committee appointments, and offices which include two places for American labor representatives, will be shared equally, Ross said.

The AFL representatives were confident that the action would be ratified by the AFL executive council when it meets in Cleveland beginning May 16. The CIO executive board also will pass on the plan at its session here in mid-May.

Deadline Falls On Assessment Protests Today

Montgomery County property owners may not legally protest their new assessments after today, Supervisor of Assessments Wilton T. Allen pointed out yesterday.

Allen said a skeleton staff would be on hand in the assessment office in Rockville to handle latecomers. Those who already have protested will still be afforded hearings before the county Appeals Tax Court, he said.

To date, at least 1500 persons have called or visited his office to have their new assessments explained, Allen said. He added that the Appeals Tax Court had acted on about 400 of those who formally appealed. About 500 such cases are pending.

A total of 35,000 pieces of property are involved in the new assessments, Allen declared. The areas assessed, he said, are: Silver Spring, Takoma Park, Wheaton, Kensington, Laytonsville, Clarksburg, the Olney-Sandy Spring-Ashton-Brookeville area, Potomac, Colesville, and areas outside the Rockville town limits.

3 New Voting Places Asked In Arlington

A special Arlington commission has recommended that three new voting precincts be added to the county's present 24, and that 65 voting machines be installed at polling places.

The recommendations were made to Circuit Court Judge W. T. McCarthy by a redistricting commission composed of Attorneys William D. Medley, Oren R. Lewis, and Navy hydrographic office employe William G. Watt.

Judge McCarthy has the final say on the proposed changes.

U. S. Repeats Offer to Aid Lagging Areas

Montevideo, Uruguay, April 29 (AP).—United States Ambassador Ellis Briggs today reiterated President Truman's offer to aid backward countries with American technical resources.

Briggs addressed a regional conference of the International Labor Office immediately after an Argentine delegate made a bitter attack on foreign capitalism.

Briggs indorsed the general principles of a report submitted by Chairman David A. Morse of the ILO on industrialization of Latin America and said the United States delegation fully agreed with Morse's statement that "this is the moment to act."

Argentine Labor Delegate Jose Espejo said, "To ask international imperialists to help in the economic development of backward countries is like asking the jailer to surrender his keys."

Senate Group Approves Bill To Permit Sale of Greenbelt

The Senate Banking Committee yesterday approved a House-passed bill which would permit a negotiated sale of Greenbelt to veteran and mutual home ownership groups.

The committee reported out the measure with only minor amendments, sending it to the Senate floor for action.

The bill insures that present tenants would be given opportunity to join any mutual ownership group seeking to purchase the property.

Wagner Act Revival Fails

time to 5:15 p. m. He was beaten 169-143 on a division vote, and when he asked for a teller count, was again defeated 189-158.

At this point, the Administration retreated, at least temporarily, and ended the day's session at 4:30 p. m. Debate on the Wood bill and an expected dozen amendments will be resumed when the House again takes up labor relations legislation next Tuesday at noon.

Representative Vito Marcantonio of New York, lone American Labor Party member in the House, got the day's session off to a vigorous start by offering the original Wagner Act, without change, as a substitute for the Wood bill.

Calls It Real Issue

The "real issue," Marcantonio asserted, was the Taft-Hartley Act versus the Wagner Act. Any move on the part of the Administration to "improve" the Wagner Act is simply "weasling" and a "betrayal" of the American workingman, Marcantonio charged.

Marcantonio won little support for his substitute, despite his challenge, and it was defeated on teller count, 275 to 37.

Representative Anthony Cavalcante (D., Pa.) moved to add to the Wood bill a civil rights amendment, making it an unfair labor practice to discharge or refuse to hire an employe, or refuse him membership in a union, on account of race, color, or religion.

Rejected Unanimously

This amendment was turned down by a voice vote, with not a single "aye" being noted. This rejection came after an appeal by Representative Adam C. Powell, jr. (D., N. Y.), a Negro, urging the House not to make the issue of civil rights a "political football." He pointed out that the House would get a chance to deal with the civil rights question later in the session.

Two amendments "easing" the union-activity provisions of the Wood bill were adopted by the House.

Representative Gerald R. Ford jr., (R., Mich.) proposed a provision, approved 202 to 158, which would permit strikers to participate in plant representation elections for six months after walking out. The Wood bill has a 90-day voting provision; the Taft-Hartley Act bans strikers from such elections; the Lesinski bill leaves this question up to the National Labor Relations Board.

Representaitve T. B. Morton (R., Ky.) offered an amendment, okayed by voice vote, which would permit strikers to seek a boycott of the struck work when the work was sent from the struck plant to another factory.

The Wood bill contains a similar clause, but limits the boycott to plants in which the employes are members of the same union local. In either case, the right to the boycott must be in the collective bargaining contract between union and management.

The Taft-Hartley Act bans all secondary boycotts; the Lesinski bill prohibits only those secondary boycotts arising out of jurisdictional disputes.

Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn is expected to make the final Administration speech before the House votes on the Wood bill, probably Tuesday evening. In order to prevent passage of the Wood bill—which would automatically kill off the Lesinski bill—Rayburn is expected to announce that the Lesinski bill will be open to specific "toughening" amendments.

NLRB Ruling

Employer Assessed GI Benefits

The National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday that an employer must pay GI benefits to a war veteran job trainee illegally dismissed because of his membership in the United Furniture Workers (CIO).

It was the first such decision under the Taft-Hartley Law.

The board found that the Taylor Manufacturing Co., Morristown, Tenn., had fired Carl W. Holt because of his union membership, in violation of the Taft-Hartley Law. It ordered the company to pay Holt, a trainee under the veterans on-the-job-training program, back wages from the date of his discharge on August 19, 1947 to March 5, 1948.

The company argued it could not be required to reimburse Holt for any GI benefits "since such benefits are a gratuity from the United States Government which the company would not ordinarily pay." Holt received $65 a month from the Government.

"We are unable to agree," the board said. "When Holt was first employed, he was informed that his earnings would consist of the 50 cents per hour paid him by the company plus the GI benefits. Consequently, the term back pay or income must be regarded as including both the wages paid by the employer and the amount which would have been forthcoming under the GI training program."

Trucker Union Ousts Three From Office

Aubrey W. Stream, president of Local 639, Truck Drivers and Helpers (AFL), and two other officials of the union have been dismissed on charges of "inefficiency and negligence," it was revealed yesterday. New officers were named to replace them.

The new president, Charles J. Bell, said the ouster followed complaints by members to international officers.

Other officers removed by order of the international following an executive board trial here, were A. E. Morris, recording secretary, and Edward Finch, secretary-treasurer.

Jerry Gradeck has replaced Morris, and Herbert Fletcher has taken over Finch's post.

Bell, who had been president of the local from 1936 to 1942, said "some of the members" had complained to international headquarters in Indianapolis tha tthe "situation here was deplorable."

He would not specify the exact nature of the complaints but asked if they concerned finances he replied "it could be."

Bell revealed that an auditor employed by the international union, Raymond McCall, and Organizer Albert Dietrich of Pittsburgh conducted an investigation here which led to the trial and the ouster of the officers April 20.

Stream, who was not available for comment yesterday, had been president since "about 1944," Bell said.

Canadian Fray Brings Arrest Of 61 Seamen

Saint John, New Brunswick, April 29 (AP).—Sixty-one seamen were arrested today after two dockside clashes between striking Canadian Seamen's Union members and more than 200 policemen.

Two seamen were taken to a hospital. Many others, both seamen and police, suffered less serious injuries in the short, sharp frays in which both sides wielded ax-handle clubs.

Among those arrested, after a rival Seafarers' International Union (AFL) crew was put aboard the strike-bound freighter Cottrell behind a protecting police line, was Edward Reid, CSU port agent. Another freighter moved into the harbor to await a second SIU crew.

The clashes came on the twenty-ninth day of a strike.

The day also was marked by the appearance in a Montreal court of 15 CSU members, 13 of them charged with disobeying lawful commands while in Cuban waters. The 13 were granted $500 bond or $100 cash bail pending a hearing May 4.

mine whether a strike is sanctioned for 60,000 Rouge plant employes.

The UAW executive board yesterday approved a walkout of 6000 workers at Ford's Lincoln-Mercury plant here May 5. That dispute also involves complaints that production lines move too fast for worker health and safety.

The issues at Bendix also include speed-up charges, along with the discharge of 47 workers and a pay rate dispute.

Rail Engineers May Strike in West

Chicago, April 29 (AP).—A strike on May 11 by some 25,000 railroad engineers against 15 Western carriers appeared possible today.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers paved the way for the walkout yesterday by rejecting a presidential fact-finding board's recommendation. The board on April 11 denied the union's demand for a second engiher on multiple unit Diesel locomotives.

Under terms of the National Railway Labor Act the engineers can strike on May 11, although a union official said "a strike is not the only alternative." He indicated the union might be agreeable to further negotiations with the railroads.

Motorcycle and Watch No Longer Are 'Secrets'

Citizens who, unwittingly, have been using these secret gadgets for years now may exhibit them in public without fear of the Espionage Act.

School Science News Is Rated With Teaching

Keeping the public informed on the advancement of science and educational matters is as important as the teaching of students, Watson Davis, director of Science Service, yesterday told the American College Public Relations Association.

When colleges and universities announce to the public through the press the achievements of their scientists, a proper educational function is being served, Davis said.

Understandable Terms Urged

He was one of a panel of speakers to discuss the role of public relations in science. Other speakers stressed the necessity of the college publicist educating the scientist to speak in terms that can be understood by the average reader.

The association, which will wind up its concention today at the Washington Hotel, voted to establish national headquarters in Washington. E. Ross Bartley of Indiana University was named president to succeed Max E. Hannum of Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa.

Train's Signal Stop Halts Attack on Girl

Cumberland, Md., April 29 (AP).—The approach of a fast passenger train broke up a struggle between the pretty little blonde telegrapher and a man at a lonely railroad signal tower early today, railroad detectives reported.

A red signal stopped the Baltimore & Ohio's eastbound Columbian Express at Vista, Pa., in the sparsely settled mountains between Connellsville and McKeesport.

Conductor F. L. Reed of Cumberland climbed into the tower and found 21-year-old Genevieve Matthews out on the floor, a gun beside her.

He stopped to pick her up and she screamed. When Reed quieted her down she said a new operator sent down yesterday from Pittsburg to learn the duties at the tower had grabbed her and torn her overalls.

He left as the Columbian approached, she told Reed. She locked the door, got her gun and collapsed.

Conductor Reed put Miss Matthews on his train and sent her to a hospital in Connellsville when the Columbian stopped there just after 3 a. m. (EST) on its way from Chicago to Washington and New York. She was discharged today. Dr. Francis J. King said she had been "only frightened," not injured or criminally attacked.

Supt. C. T. Williams of the B. & O.'s Pittsburgh division said his special police picked up a 43-year-old operator for questioning when he arrived in Pittsburgh later on a local from Connellsville. No charges have been filed.

When eastbound No. 20 passed the Vista tower about 30 minutes ahead of the Columbian it automatically set red danger signals. The Columbian stopped when the operator failed to reset them on clear.

Rockville Builder Charged in Slaying

Miss Stone Benson

A coroner's jury in Chicago yesterday held Henry Benson, 42, superintendent of a Rockville, Md., construction company, for the grand jury on a charge of murdering Doris Stone, 26, a woman friend. The verdict was returned several hours after Miss Stone died of a beating which police said she received Tuesday night in a hotel room. Police said Benson, whose home is in Flushing, N. Y., made a statement that he beat Miss Stone and kicked her with his stocking feet after an argument over another man.

13 Receive Carnegie Hero Medals

Pittsburgh, April 29 (U.P.).—The Carnegie Hero Fund Commission today announced 13 awards, four of them posthumous, for heroic rescue efforts.

Recipients included a Mississippi clergyman who was lowered into a caved-in well and saved a 72-year-old one-armed farmer buried under 20 feet of debris.

The minister, John A. Wade, 33, of Kilmichael, Miss., was given a silver medal for the rescue of Simon W. Dismukes. The 12 others received bronze medals.

The commission was established in 1904 by the late Andrew Carnegie and makes the citations three times annually.

A bronze medal and death benefits were received by Mrs. Anna Rita Urban, 31, Flushing, L. I., whose husband died in the rescue of an unidentified young woman bather at Amityville, N. Y., last July 24.

Mrs. Urban herself received a medal for the rescue of the woman, and Barbara V. Davidson, 26, of New York, received an award for assisting in the woman's rescue and helping in the attempt to rescue Mrs. Urban's husband.

Cited for rescuing Leonard Boston, 26, from his burning airplane near Charleston, W. Va., December 6, 1947, were:

Delford O. Taylor, 39, and Negroes Aaron Wesley Flood, 21, and Preston N. Miller, 25, all of Charleston.

Roy D. Hembree, 37, Kaykay, Ky., a mine motorman, received the award for the rescue of James M. Main, 24, and Main's brother, William, 30, after their plane crashed in flames. Both brothers died.

A posthumous award went to the widow of George A. Clark, Route 2, Bassett, Va., who died saving well-digger John H. Bryant, 60, overcome by carbon monoxide in a well 67 feet deep.

Another posthumous award was received by Shirley Ann Fisher, Buchanan, Va., for her father, Berlin R. Fisher. Fisher died helping save an 11-year-old girl from drowning.

The fourth posthumous citation was given to Philip E. Carleton, Hamden, Conn., for his son, Joseph P. Carleton, 20, who lost his life attempting to save 27-year-old Jane Curtiss from drowning.

Patsy Smalling, 19, Bristol, Tenn., received a medal for saving Jack L. Wyatt, 20, from drowning.

H. Oscar Montgomery, Statesville, N. C., was cited for preventing a gasoline truck explosion at Harmony, N. C.

Backseat Driving By Spouse Wins Wife New Trial

Los Angeles, April 29 (AP).—Backseat driving is a woman's prerogative. But for a man—well, it's just his tough luck.

Appellate Court ordered a retrial for Mrs. Cora E. Stalley yesterday after she claimed she drove through a pedestrian zone—and nearly through a pedestrian—on her husband's advice. She had been fined $10 in City Court.

But the higher court pointed out the the municipal judge failed to instruct the jury on a California law which says a married woman is not responsible for a misdemeanor acting on command of her husband.

On the reverse or normal state of affairs, when wifey is in the backseat, the law is strangely silent.

It's a woman's world, buddy.

Mrs. Staley Granted Divorce From ECA Aide

Key West, Fla., April 29 (AP).—Mrs. Lenore M. Staley of Miami Beach, Fla., was awarded a divorce yesterday from Augustus E. Staley, jr., chief of the Economic Cooperation Administration mission to Norway.

Mrs. Staley charged extreme cruelty and said she had been separated from her husband since December, 1948.

She was awarded custody of their three children.

No alimony was asked. It was understood a property settlement had been made out of court.

Carpenter Held On Charge of Rape, Robbery

A Rogers Heights (Md.) carpenter was charged yesterday with rape, sodomy and robbery of a 30-year-old Baltimore waitress in a wooded area near Lanham, Md.

Prince Georges County Police identified him as Shelby Warren Colbert, 29, 5025 54th pl. He was held without bond in Hyattsville Jail. The alleged attack occured early yesterday a short distance from his parked convertible, occupied by two other couples, police said.

The four, and the woman, were booked at Hyattsville as State witnesses and then released under $100 bond each. A hearing was tentatively set for May 9.

Police quoted the complainant as saying she was dragged from the convertible, parked on the Lanham Speedway, and forced into a nearby wooded area, where she said Colbert forced her into an act of perversion and then raped her. During the scuffle, she lost a lapel watch, which police said was found later in Colbert's pocket.

The woman related that she finally broke away from Colbert and hid in the woods nearby, "in fear of my life." She said she heard other members of the party calling her by name, but when they gave up the search, she made her way to Defense Highyway about a quarter of a mile away, she said. A truck driver drove her to a filling station, where she called police.

A short time later, Prince Georges County police intercepted Colbert and the two other couples driving along Baltimore blvd. in Hyattsville.

The complainant said she and another young woman from Baltimore first met Colbert, the other two men and the third young woman in a Colmar Manor tavern around 2 a. m. She said she and her friend accepted their offer of a ride into Washington.

Belloff Tells Of Bedroom Exit by Rival

Simon Beloff, 67, well-to-do real estate dealer, yesterday related in District Court how he came home unexpectedly to find his wife clad only in a bathrobe and Leon Spivak, 40, also a real estate dealer, going out a window.

"It was around January or February, 1947. There she was unusually dressed in a bathrobe she never wears and her hair in pigtails. I saw him running out the side window. The bed was open like when you're ready to go to bed," he asserted.

Beloff's tesctimony came at the opening of a jury trial in which he seeks $100,000 damages from Spivak for alienating the affections of Mrs. Beloff.

Granted Absolute Divorce

He was granted an absolute divorce on grounds of adultery from Mrs. May Beloff, 31, of 1351 Spring rd. nw., last November, after naming Spivak as corespondent. He was also given custody of their 4-year-old daughter, Sylvia, who lives with him at 1611 Decatur st. nw.

Sputtering with indignation, the short, stout real estate dealer yesterday repeated much of the testimony he gave during the divorce trial about the visits Spivak made to Mrs. Beloff.

Beloff said there were several occasions on which he saw Mrs. Beloff and Spivak together in Far Rockaway, N. Y., where she was visiting her parents in 1947.

Start of Troubles

His marital woes all started a short while after he rented Spivak desk space in his own office in 1946, Beloff declared.

"Before she met Spivak, my wife had very much affection for me, but that changed. Now I am ashamed to walk the streets because of humiliating questions. I'm sick and under a doctor's care. I've neglected my business. I can hardly remember what happened yesterday," he declared.

The trial will resume Monday at 10 a. m. before Judge David A. Pine.

Slaying Blame Put on Brother In Statement

Bland, Va., April 29 (AP).—A statement was admitted in the trial of Ralph A. Newberry, 37, here today in which he allegedly blamed the killing and beheading of his wife on his brother, Samuel, 31.

The statement was obtained by fficers last January 12. That was the day after a headless body that the State contends was that of Katheryn S. Newberry, 37, was found on a mountain near Mechanicsburg.

State Police Sergeant Numa Helsebeck, who said he conducted the questioning January 12, read the four-page typewritten document to the jury in Bland County Circuit Court today.

"I didn't do nothing myself," Ralph was quoted in the statement.

In it he told officers that on the night of anuary 6 Samuel stepped out on the porch of the Newberry farm home, got a rifle came back in and shot Katheryn.

'Yes, I know it did," was his quoted answer to Helsebeck's question as to whether the shot killed her.

The prosecution contends she was alive when her head was cut off and two medical witnesses have testified they believed this was the case.

Asked what he thought was Samuel's motive for killing her, he replied in the statement:

"Beats me. She took care of him and did his washing and ironing."

The statement quoted Ralph that the body was taken to the basement and that Ralph did not see it again for "a couple of days." He said he did not help put the body in the sack in which it was found on Big Walker Mountain.

"I'll be darn if I knew" was the answer to Helsenbeck's question as to when Samuel cut the victim's head off.

'He (Samuel) said 'Good riddance' and I started crying," Ralph was quoted.

Throughout the statement he denied any part in beheading the slain woman.

As to a possible reason for beheading her, he was quoted that "I am imagining he (Samuel) cut it off to get the bullet out so you couldn't tell how she was killed."

Samuel Newberry also is under a murder indictment in the case. No date has been set for his trial.

Youth Admits W. Va. Double Murder in '47

Cleveland, April 29 (U.P.).—Charles Brown, 20, today confessed a double "lover's lane" murder in Beckley, W. Va., a year and a half ago, police said.

Brown, arrested here for the attempted holdup of a taxi driver, told patrolman Frank Kunc that "you cops have treated me so well I want to make a clean breast of it."

Beckley police confirmed the double murder in November, 1947. Beckley officers said money was taken during the holdup of a couple in a parked car.

They said the slain couple was Ray Bailey, 50, and Mrs. Nellie Mae Rand, 39, wife of a prominent Beckley dentist.

British Radio Listeners Hear Uncensored Attack on Art

London, April 29 (U.P.).—Several million startled radio listeners heard the annual Royal Academy of Art banquet nearly break up in disorder last night when the society's president, Sir Alfred Munnings, attacked modern art in a peppery uncensored speech.

Flanked by such dignitaries as Winston Churchill, Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery and the Archbishop of Canterbury, the 71-year-old Munings, who specializes in painting of horses, punctuated his speech over BBC with such phrases as "by God," "by heavens" and "damned."

When he mentioned disapprovingly the works of French impressionist painter Henri Matisse, angry shouts and table-pounding interrupted him.

Sir Alfred cried, "I hear other members interrupting me. I am the president and I have the right to speak. I shall not be heard next year, thank God."

BBC's switchboard was swamped with calls protesting Sir Alfred's language and the banquet's rowdiness.

Sir Alfred said, "Not so long ago Mr. Churchill and I were walking together. Mr. Churchill said to me, 'Alfred, if we saw Pablo Picasso (another impressionist) coming down the street would you join me in kicking him hard in a certain part of his body?'"

"I said, 'By God, I would, Winston.'"

U. S. Flier's Wife Is Hunted In Acid Attack on Fraulein

Munich, Germany, April 29 (U.P.).—European and United States port authorities today were alerted to watch for the attractive young wife of an American Air Force sergeant who disappeared April 14 after allegedly burning her husband's German girl friend with acid and shearing off her hair.

Donald C. Noggle, of the American military government in Bavaria, said pretty Lenni Martin, wife of Sergt. Charles H. Martin, Picher, Okla., may be aboard a ship en route to New York.

Mrs. Martin is charged, he said, with injuring 18-year-old Elizabeth Bauer whom she suspected of stealing her husband's affections.

Martin is being detained here for questioning.

The raven-haired fraulein, the complaint said, was beaten, stripped of her clothing and the lower part of her body doused with raw Lysol.

After clipping off the German girl's hair the complaint said, Mrs. Martin took some pictures of her soldier-husband found in Elizabeth's purse and crammed them down the girl's throat.

German doctors said Mrs. Martin may be liable under a German criminal statute relating to permanent loss of bodily function, including that of procreation.

Philippine Troops Move on Guerillas

Manila, Philippines, April 29 (AP).—The crack "Skull and Bones" combat team of the Philippine constabulary moved into action today against Communist-led guerillas believed responsible for the ambush murder of Mrs. Aurora Quezon and 11 others.

Press reports said over 1,000 plane and tank supported troops, led by the veteran unit, were skirmishing with the outlaws in the rugged central Luzon hills, but no large-scale fighting was believed in progress yet.

Reports of the fighting came as Mrs. Quezon, widow of Manuel L. Quezon, first President of the Philippine Commonwealth, her daughter and her son-in-law with her, in yesterday's massacre were buried in a state funeral attended by President Elpidio Quirino and thousands of mourning Filipinos.

The Nueva Ecija constabulary commander, Lieut. Col. Angel Magellanes, reported the Hukbalahap band responsible for the attack consisted of 300 guerillas, led by the notorious Huk commander "Viernes."

One hundred thousand mourners lined the 3-mile funeral route through Manila to pay their last respects to the beloved "Mother of the Philippines," and thousands more continued on to the cemetery where the state funeral was held at dusk.

U. S. Versus USSR

Mindszenty Charges Laid Before U. N.

Flushing, N. Y., April 29 (U.P.).—The United States told the United Nations General Assembly today that Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty and other church leaders in Hungary and Bulgaria were imprisoned not for the offenses with which they were charged "but because their governments have decided to liquidate them as sources of independent opinion."

United States Delegate Benjamin V. Cohen declared the United States believed that in both Hungary and Bulgaria "a minority group has seized the instrumentalities of government through force and intimidation and maintained itself in power through suppression of every one of the human rights and fundamental freedoms."

Russia's Andrei Gromyko again challenged the U. N.'s right to consider the clerics' trials.

"This is a plot against Hungary and Bulgaria," he said.

In an indirect reference to the Communist trials in New York, Gromyko said:

"It is frightening to hear the word freedom from the American delegate, in whose country people are hailed before tribunals because they want to have freedom of political conviction."

Gromyko said Cardinal Mindszenty "awaited with impatience a war between the United States and the Soviet Union. The discussion here is aimed merely at covering up this criminal."

Assembly President Herbert V. Evatt of Australia adjourned debate at 7 p. m. until 11 a. m. for the first Saturday plenary meeting this session.

The Assembly was considering a Bolivian resolution expressing concern over the churchmen's trials and withholding further U. N. action pending outcome of steps taken by the United States and Britain under the peace treaties.

Cohen said the United States considered it a duty to carry through the procedures of the peace treaties safeguarding human rights.

"To these and other European nations," he said, "four years ago, the three war leaders of the United Nations—Stalin, Churchill and Roosevelt—solemnly pledged that freedom would be restored; not to their former rule and not to a new set of rulers but to these people themselves."

The Assembly's steering committee moved to expedite Israel's admission as the fifty-ninth U. N. member by switching the question to the special political committee which will discuss it next week.

General Assembly delegates voted over objections from the six Soviet-bloc states to appoint a 14-nation committee to study Secretary General Trygve Lie's proposal to establish a U. N. guard force.

Romania Bars Most of Land To Diplomats

Bucharest, Romania, April 29 (AP).—Foreign diplomats were ordered today to stay out of about two-thirds of Romania's territory, including a belt 30 miles wide around the frontiers.

The government handed to foreign embassies, legations and missions a circular note listing "restricted area" in which the staff members will not be permitted.

These include the provinces of Banat, in southwestern Romania bordering Yugoslavia; Bucovina, in the northwest; Moldavia, in the east; and Dobruja, on the Black Sea. In addition, 11 counties are listed.

Exceptions were made to permit entry to the Bucharest suburbs and resorts.

The order was issued amid rumors that the Romanian government is about to be streamlined on the Communist formula adopted in Soviet Russia, Poland and Bulgaria.

Technicians have been called upon to occupy administrative posts in the cabinet, relieving key Communists so they may concentrate on the party program.

The reasoning on a Romanian shift is supported by the fact Gheorghe Gheorghiu-dej styles himself secretary general of the Romanian Workers (Communist) Party in signing an article in the May Day Cominform Journal attacking Premier Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia.

Greek Rebels' Losses Put at Fifth of Forces

Athens, April 29 (AP).—The Greek army, using American tactics, has whittled Communist-led guerilla forces by one-fifth in the past year to a total of 20,000 men, a United States spokesman said today. That means there are about 10 men in the national armed forces for every guerilla. However, the government must divide its combat units between guard duty and field duty, which tends to offset the numerical advantage.

The national army has sharply cut the flow of recruits into the Communist camp, the spokesman said in a review for newsmen.

A report that placed guerilla casualties for the past year at 33,000, not including wounded, was hailed by Lieut. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, head of the United States military mission here, as "a report of success." He warned, however, against "too much optimism."

The spokesman gave these 1948 casualty figures:

Guerillas: Dead, 15,700; captured, 8900; surrendered, 8256; (no figures on wounded available). National forces, dead, 3843; wounded, 14,705; missing, over 2000.

Geisha Girl Deplores Jap Prostitution Law

Tokyo, April 29 (U.P.).—The city assembly called a well-dressed young prostitute today to give her view of a proposed ordinance to forbid prostitution. Newspapers asked if burglars would be called to discuss changes in criminal law.

Hisae Koizumi said any experienced prostitute could escape punishment under the proposed law.

Hisae said she was sold by her parents when she was 5 years old to be raised as a Geisha girl. Later a brothel manager bought her.

Burma Regains Land

Rangoon, Burma, April 29 (AP).—The Burmese government announced today it has strengthened its hold on Mandalay by regaining 46 miles of territory in central Burma from rebelling Karens and Communists.

Reds Strike at Hangchow

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ASSAULT—Chinese Communist forces (shaded arrows) yesterday intensified drives to reach Hangchow and isolate Shanghai. The Red attack (open arrow) on the Chinese metropolis appears to be a move to protect the flanks of the south-bound drives.

Why They Built That Fence

San Francisco, April 29 (AP).—Shanghai's defenders may have created a new military simile—as weak as a wooden fence.

That 35-mile wooden fence recently built around Shanghai at great labor could be climbed over by almost anybody, and it is a wonder the coolies haven't already demolished it for firewood. The mud pillboxes that stud it could be spattered to bits by any artillery shell.

Yet there are reasons for that type of "defense."

First is the Chinese faith in walls. You always build a wall around your house in China. It will not keep out anyone who really wants to get in, but it may slow down a lot of less resolute characters.

The Great Wall of China was like that. It kept out a lot of barbarians in the north who didn't really have their hearts in an invasion, but never those who meant business.

The main reason probably was to keep Nationalist garrison troops busy. At times like this, idle troops in China get interested in other people's property, particularly when their pay is infrequent and worth almost nothing.

A soldier who drives stakes or shovels mud all day may have less ambition to go prowling by nightfall.

There is also the possibility that building a fence was a pretty good business deal for someone. It certainly took a lot of scarce lumber.

Britain Seeks Contact With Chinese Reds

London, April 29 (AP).—Britain is trying to establish "friendly relations" with the Chinese Communist government, a Foreign Office spokesman said today.

He said such contact with the Chinese Communists will not affect Britain's present relations with the Nationalist government although the Foreign Office in London does not know where the Kuomintang is at the moment.

Diplomatic observers speculated his statements suggest Britain may soon give de facto recognition to Mao Tze-tung's Communist government as the only effective authority in most of troubled China.

During the American civil war Britain recognized the Confederacy as a belligerent power while maintaining its normal relations with the Federal government.

The spokesman was asked whether the establishment of "friendly relations" with the Communists would affect Britain's relations with the Nationalist government.

He replied: "Where is the Chinese Nationalist government? Some of its members are in Shanghai, some in Nanking. We have diplomatic officials in both cities."

Indonesians, Dutch Ask for Plan by U. N.

Batavia, Java, April 29 (AP).—Deadlocked Dutch and Indonesian republican negotiators placed in United Nations hands today the task of drawing a basic plan to restore peace in Indonesia.

Neither side committed itself, however, to accept the plan when completed by H. Merle Cochran, American delegate and temporary chairman of the U. N. Commission on Indonesia.

J. H. van Royen, representing the Dutch, and Mohamed Hatta, for the Indonesians, agreed after a week of fruitless discussion to let Cochran try his hand. They have been unable to agree on a plan for restoring the Indonesian republican government to power in Jogjakarta as ordered by the U. N.

Belgians Elect June 26

Brussels, Belgium, April 29 (U.P.).—The Belgian cabinet today agreed on June 26 as the date for general and provincial elections.

Pakistan Aims At Open Door

London, April 29 (AP).—Pakistan reserves the right to leave the British Commonwealth any time it chooses, Premier Liaquat Ali Khan said today.

The Pakistan premier referred to the recent eight-nation Commonweath conference in London which gave India the right to become fully independent and yet keep the trade advantages of a Commonwealth member.

"Pakistan continues to retain full freedom . . . with regard to whether it shall freely choose to continue its membership on the existing basis or shall substitute full membership for the basis adopted by India, or shall, if it so decides, go out of the Commonwealth altogether," Ali Kahn said.

German Cartel 'Busting' Held 100 % Failure; Clay Advisers Blamed for 'Nullifying' Program

By John B. Owen
Associated Press Staff Writer

American occupation officials have failed to smash a single one of Germany's giant monopolies under a crackdown law now two years old, investigators said yesterday.

A three-man committee, flown to the scene by the Army last December, found that only one such case was filed, but it was never completed.

It recorded testimony that high decartelization officials were out of step with presidential policy, fearing it would impede German recovery.

Flatly disagreeing with the view, the committee declared that a democratic economy requires the anticartel policy and will prosper under it. The committee contended that the great trusts greatly facilitated Hitler's war career, and that their elimination will help safeguard peace.

The committee demanded energetic enforcement of antitrust policy—under civilian control. The law itself was enacted by the American military government for the United States zone.

The three men were appointed last December by Kenneth C. Royall, then Secretary of the Army, to study progress of the decartelization program. The monopoly-busting drive was ordered by President Roosevelt and supported by President Truman.

Committee members were Chairman Garland S. Ferguson, jr., member of the Federal Trade Commission; Samuel S. Isseks, appointed at the suggestion of Attorney General Tom Clark, and A. T. Kearney, recommended by Paul Hoffman, administrator of the European Recovery Program.

The program came under the decartelization branch of the American Military Government. The branch was set up to "deconcentrate" monopolies and eliminate cartel practices.

The sharpest criticism came from Isseks in a supplementary report after his indorsement of the main report. Isseks blamed statements of "the two economic advisers to the military governor" for failure of the antimonopoly program.

The military governor, Gen. Lucius D. Clay, has had as his economic advisers, first, Maj. Gen. William H. Draper, jr., until recently Undersecretary of the Army, and, at present, Lawrence Wilkinson.

The two, Isseks said, had repeatedly contended that any deconcentration would delay Germany's economic advance. The committee report itself said that "it appears" that Clay's economic advisers generally took such a position.

Isseks said the deconcentration program was "completely nullified" when Wilkinson and his deputy, Phillips Hawkins, "pigeonholed" a principal case. Turning to Richardson Bronson, chief of the branch, Isseks said he had never indicated support for the deconcentration plan and any action he took generally was obstructive. Employes of the branch itself, Isseks said, have vigorously supported the program.

One on the Aisle—

Anita Loos Role Demands Marilyn

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE: Marilyn Maxwell, the Capitol's headliner, has in abundance that direct quality that makes me think theater people are the most enjoyable of the human race . . . I don't mean her obviously beautiful charms . . . With most theater people, you either make contact as soon as you meet them or you just don't; temperamental, moody they may be, but they are direct and spontaneous . . . They're conscious of time, working on tight schedules, and none is wasted when you first meet them . . . It's one of the reasons for quick first-name familiarity . . . Marilyn is like that; you talk to her for a minute and instantly you're old friends . . . When she was a little girl her mother was a pianist in a silent movie house: "I used to see all the movies free." . . . Then she became a singer and a dancer, which explains why she's so at ease on the Capitol's big stage . . . Her work as the naughty girl in "Summer Holiday" was her first real acting assignment and it's brought her a solid reception in "Champion," due shortly at the Palace . . . Now, of course, she's in danger of being typed as a blonde menace . . . Which is why Marilyn's luncheon companions at the Statler yesterday agreed she should accept the lead in the projected musical version of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." . . . Robbins and Stein are doing the music and Joseph Fields is working on the book with Authoress Anita Loos. This one sounds like a most promising musical and Marilyn would be a merry Lorelei . . . At the moment she's afraid her throat is acting up: "It's not sore, just stiff and foggy; I'm not sure what's the matter." . . . We all urged her to try Judith Anderson's honey and lemon treatment . . . She's a doll, that Marilyn.

TALLULAH BANKHEAD will open the Olney season, and what a coup that is! . . . The writer-baseball fan will bring down "Private Lives" for two weeks beginning Tuesday, May 31, with the same cast that's been playing all season with her on 45th st.: Donald Cook, Barbara Baxley, William Langford and Therese Quadri . . . Olney seats this year will be sold at Jordan's, 13th and G, and you can start sending in mail orders now; the box office will open Monday, May 16 . . . Price scale will be same as last year: $1.80, $2.40 and $3 for evenings, $1.20 and $1.80 matinees . . . There'll be Saturday and Sunday matinees, and Tallulah's only night off before she closes Sunday night, Jun e12 -cmfwmhmhmh night, June 12, will be Monday, June 6 . . . When you send in your mail orders to the Olney box office, Jordan's, don't forget to enclose a self-addressed, stamped return envelop . . . As well as the mony!

ERNIE EMERLING and Dan Terrell, once of F st., now of B'way, who are always cooking up bright ideas for the Nation's movie critics' spare time, have a new one to follow that jigsaw puzzle they sent along last week for "Portrait of Jennie." . . . This is a free course in the Astaire Swing Trot at "Any Fred Astaire Dance Studio." . . . Fascinating as the new phone books are (I've only just dipped into my two new ones, but I've discovered lots of new people!), I don't find an Astaire studio here . . . I had a foot operation a bit ago, but I hope to be in trim when Fred and Ginger Rogers arrive at the Capitol in "The Barkleys of Broadway" . . . But wotta town: no theater, no decent concert hall, no Astaire Dance Studio.

ROBERT BRACKMAN'S portrait of Jennifer Jones, which is what the Trans-Lux picture, "Portrait of Jennie" is all about, is now hanging in a choice Woodward and Lothrop window . . . It'll be there another week.

MRS. HENRIK ARCTOWSKI'S phone call emphasizes again that Scott's trip to the South Pole happened not so long ago as you might think while watching "Scott of the Antarctic" at the Playhouse . . . The wife of the Smithsonian scientist, she well recalls a lecture her husband gave in Brussels, attended by Amundsen, which gave him the plan he subsequently followed when he "changed his mind" about going to the North Pole . . . Scott had asked him to go to the South with him, but the Norwegian masked his real intent through the surprise tactics that brought him first to the Pole . . . This destroyed Scott's essential scientific purpose and broke his heart, two aspects which are foolishly ignored in the picture. . . . The Arctowskis knew the Scotts well. . . . When I asked her how she happened to speak American English, she replied: "Why, I am an American. I met and married my Pole in London 50 years ago!"

BIBI OSTERWALD, the Government girl who went to Broadway, closed in "Magnolia Alley" after only a week's run . . . But she's still got an income; you can catch her songs these nights at Le Ruban Bleu.

BRIEFS: Joan Crawford arrives on the Warner screen today in "Flamingo Road." . . . The Institute of Contemporary Arts tonight revives Lon Chaney's "The Unholy Three' in its hall at 1322 New York ave., at 8:40 . . . E. M. Loew's Drive-In on Route 1 resumes Saturday midnight shows tonight . . . The American College Public Relations Association convention at the Washington yesterday commended 20th Century for "its wholesome, sparkling portrayal of campus life in the outstanding picture, 'Apartment for Peggy.'"

SHE'S EVEN NICER THAN THIS: Marilyn Maxwell, headlining the Capitol stage show, is a movie glamour girl you'll recall from "Summer Holiday"' seen soon in "Champion." Alluring as she is here, Marilyn has an added zest and beauty that could maks her a wow for Broadways forthcoming musical, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

NEW YORK.—Relatives of the Greek royal family are disturbed by a report that Princess Andrew of Greece is planning to retire to a nunnery. The princess is the mother of the Duke of Edinburg and the grandmother of the future King of England . . . She now is spending most of her time in the Aegean Islands off Tenos. Her son has asked her to come to England before she makes her decision, and at least see her grandson, Prince Charles, before she retires from mortal cares and seeks repose in the church.

Tom Dewey will tour the country, as titular head of the Republican Party, as soon as he returns from his European trip. His speeches will be devoted to foreign affairs . . . Gary Davis, the world citizen, has been informed that it will not be difficult for him to regain his American citizenship because he's taken no oath of allegiance to any other country. His mother, Mrs. Meyer Davis, sailed to join him this week. His family still supports him because France won't issue a work permit for him . . . Mrs. Harvey Cushing is ailing seriously. She's the mother of Mrs. Bill Paley, Mrs. Jock Whitney and Mrs. Vincent Astor.

Tallulah Bankhead is continuing her political activities. She's giving a big party for Candidate F.D.R., jr. . . . Because the Soviet, Indian and Lebanese delegates to the U. N. are named Malik—it means king—a U. N. official is paraphrasing Huey Long's slogan: "Every delegate a malik" . . . Gerald Kersh, the novelist, is returning to his cold-water flat in Manhattan, because his magnificent new estate in Barbados just burned down . . . The publisher of one of the largest big city newspapers will appeal to the Government for postal-rate relief to be extended to the smalltown papers.

Bill Tabbert of "South Pacific," who had long, dark hair in the five musicals in which he appeared, had his hair cut and bleached by Mary Martin, star of the show . . . Just before Charles MacArthur was given a blood transfusion at Lenox Hill Hospital last week, he requested that he be given a tap-dancer's blood, explaining: "I've always wanted to tap-dance."

Senators Reject 5 Pct. Reduction In Money Bill

The Senate Appropriations Committee rejected by a 13-to-4 vote yesterday an amendment by Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) to lop 5 per cent off the $3,112,968,000 Treasury-Postoffice money bill.

Chairman McKellar (D., Tenn) announced the vote after the committee previously had approved the bill with a $40,250,600 increase over the amount voted by the House.

Ferguson's move was in line with a proposal which the Senate failed to adopt Thursday on the $2,396,000,000 Labor-Federal Security measure. However, the Senate sent the measure back to its Appropriations Committee with instructions to cut it.

Humphrey Asks Easier Politics Rule for Workers

By The Associated Press

Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) yesterday asked the Senate Rules Committee to ease up on the rule that Government employes who engage in politics must be fired.

Harry Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, also urged approved of legislation to this end which has passed the House.

They said it ought to be discretionary with the Civil Service Commission to discharge Federal employes for violating the Hatch "clean politics" act.

Under the present law, they said, Government workers have been fired for letting their names be used politically, not knowing it meant their jobs.

Harriman Tells Of Europe's Fears

Informant's Gift

$50 of FBI Funds Aiding Red Defense

ANGELA CALOMIRIS

New York, April 29 (AP).—Fifty dollars of FBI funds are being used in the defense of the 11 American Communist leaders, a Government witness revealed today.

Miss Angela Calomiris, Greenwich Village photographer who has served as an FBI informant in the Communist Party for seven years, testified she gave the money to the trial defense fund.

She added that the FBI paid all of her expenses including this $50.

The testimony was given on cross-examination in which Miss Calomiris also revealed that she had joined several organizations besides the Communist Party. Other FBI undercover workers have testified similarly in the trial.

The photographer revealed that she had taken pictures of many individuals and groups in the party. These were included in the voluminous files she turned over to the Government security agency.

She said she joined the CIO United Office and Professional Workers at the direction of her branch organizer in the party. Other groups with which she affiliated were the International Workers Order, the American Labor Party and the Progressive Party.

Defense attorneys sought to ask about many details of the photographer's life but most of them were overruled by Federal Judge Harold R. Medina.

Finally, Louis F. McCabe, Philadelphia attorney, inquired:

"Have you any children?"

The court, apparently understanding that the prosecution objected, immediately sustained it.

But Edward C. Wallace of the prosecution staff, said he had made no objection and wanted the witness to answer. Miss Calomiris then said:

"I do not."

Wallace commented, "I think counsel ought to be admonished for asking such a question. I like fair questions."

Medina said, "I certainly would not have asked such a question when I was a lawyer."

Defense Attorney Richard F. Gladstein of San Francisco arose at once to ask that both remarks be stricken from the record. The judge declined to do so.

As court adjourned for the weekend, Gladstein attempted to get Miss Calomiris to say whether she had signed a pledge of loyalty to the Communist Party contained in a paper he presented to her.

"It's possible I signed it," she said. "I do not recall that I signed it, however."

Western Europe still has fears that Germany may "join up with the East in some way to make her dangerous," W. Averell Harriman, roving ambassador to Marshall Plan countries, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday.

He added however, that there is a 'growing confidence and optimism" in western Europe, encouraged by the North Atlantic Treaty and the proposed military assistance program implementing it. The committee is conducting hearings on the pact.

Under questioning by Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) Harriman indicated that Europe's three greatest worries are being overcome by what he called the "four pillars" for security.

Three Fears Dominant

Europe's chief fears were named as fear of Russia, fear of a "resurrected Germany," and fear of economic disintegration.

The "four pillars" of reassurance to western Europe, Harriman listed as:

1. The military and economic strength of the United States.

2. The European Recovery Program.

3. The proposed North Atlantic pact.

4. The proposed military assistance and mutual aid program to "implement" that pact.

Harriman asserted that he found no desire anywhere to rebuild Germany's military power, but that an "economically healthy" Germany is necessary to the economic rebuilding of Europe was generally accepted.

Two Clauses Decisive

Harriman asserted that western Europe decided to sign the Atlantic pact only after "sober and searching" discussions.

"This decision," he said, "was based on the acceptance of the principle that neither appeasement nor neutrality could be relied upon —that it was only through unity of purpose and action of free men that there could be hope for future peace and security. This was a momentous decision."

The decision of the European signatories to join, he said, was based on Articles 5 and 3 of the pact. He listed these two clauses, which he said in the European mind are "inseparable" as: (1) that an armed attack against one shall be considered an attack against all, and (2) providing means of continuous and effective self-help and mutual aid to resist armed attack.

"The participation of the United States in the pact is of course the factor that is developing confidence," he said. "The Europeans know that without the United States, no association among the free peoples of western Europe would be effective.

"The strength of the United States gives strength and meaning to the pact. The proposal for military aid from the United States gives vitality and meaning to the concept of effective self-help and mutual aid to resist armed attack."

New Wave of Confidence

There exists in western Europe today, he said, "a growing wave of confidence, instilled by the concept that the North Atlantic treaty that free men will stand together."

If the United States, he said, "should turn aside at this moment, I doubt whether we can ever again recapture that spirit."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenburg, ranking Republican on the committee, remarked he thought too much emphasis was being put by Administration witnesses on the military aid program. He said he "would hate to see" importance of the North Atlantic treaty "yardsticked" by the cost of the military aid needed to implement it—a cost he referred to as a "trivial $1,130,000,000."

In response, Harriman said he felt "the flow of some equipment into western Europe would be concrete evidence that we have an interest in their problems of self-defense."

Set-to With Republicans

Harriman ended his testimony with a lively set-to with Republican Senators opposing the treaty. Arthur V. Watkins (Utah) and Forrest C. Donnell (Mo.). Watkins later told a reporter that he is sure the cost of the arms program will be "several times" the 1130 millions set for the first year. He based his estimate, he said, on a statement by Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson that some of the arms we will furnish will be valued at only about 15 per cent of their original cost.

Harriman asured Donnell that Administration plans for military aid did not include sending more troops to Europe. He added that he had never heard such a proposal discussed in Europe, and that western Europe wouldn't welcome it.

"I don't know of any nation that wants American occupation," he said.

WILLIAM E. FOLEY

Jury Told How Judy Pouted

as her fast-talking New York attorney was cross-examining Foley.

Mother Manages to Laugh

Mrs. Rebecca Coplon, the defendant's sad-eyed mother, sat near her and for most of the time looked down toward the floor. However, once she, too, managed to laugh.

Wrangling between Defense Attorney Palmer and Prosecutors Whearty and John M. Kelley, jr., has marked the trial from the outset.

Judge Albert L. Reeves yesterday reproached Palmer for making "side remarks" and "making mountains out of molehills."

Attorney Kelley later went after Palmer for a "snide" remark. The New Yorker retorted that Kelley's words were "contemptible."

"Sit down and behave yourself," Palmer yelled at him, and then apologized for the outburst.

Asked to See Top Secret

Foley, the first witness of the day, told how Miss Coplon asked him three times to see an FBI report marked "top secret."

He said he had first heard of Miss Coplon's connection with the Russian Gubitchev late last January. The information, he said, was given to him by Peter Campbell Brown, who was acting for Peyton Ford, Assistant to the Attorney General.

"Was anything said about Judith running around with him?" Defense Attorney Palmer asked.

"Yes," said Foley.

"Do you hate every Communist?" Palmer asked.

"No," Foley said.

"Do you believe Communists are the enemy of the United States?"

"Potentially so."

"Is every Russian a potential enemy of the United States?"

"Possibly," said Foley.

Made Complaint Against Her

In response to another question, Foley said that he had made a complaint against Miss Coplon after she asked him for internal security reports.

Palmer wanted to know if Miss Coplon hadn't recommended prosecution of Russia's Amtorg Trading Co., but Foley said he couldn't recall such a recommendation.

The defense attorney devoted considerable time to what seemed to him a contradiction growing out what Foley described as a "hot and interesting" report. This report, according to earlier testimony, was made out by FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover and was handed to Foley by Assistant to the Attorney General Ford. Foley, in turn, showed it to Miss Coplon.

Prosecutor Whearty told the jury Thursday that part of this report was "false."

Didn't Know It Was Fake

Defense Attorney Palmer asked Foley who told him to show it to Miss Coplon. Foley's answer was that nobody had.

Foley testified further that he didn't know the report was "a fake or plant."

Palmer brought out that Foley had shown the "hot and interesting" report to Miss Coplon on the morning of March 4 despite the fact that he knew she was being investigated.

That night, in New York, Miss Coplon was arrested by FBI agents while she was with Gubitchev. The Government claims that among the papers found in her handbag was a memorandum based on the report.

Judge Reeves adjourned the trial until Monday morning at 10 o'clock. The lawyers in the case now think it will continue throughout the coming week and probably into the week following that.

Senate Group Backs Bill to Block Spies

Senators moved yesterday to tighten the Government's defenses against spies.

A Senate Judiciary Subcommittee approved a bill designed to improve the Nation's internal security against foreign intelligence agents and saboteurs. The full committee will be asked to act on it Monday.

In another development touching on security problems Representative Velde (R., Ill.), a former FBI agent, disclosed he has been subpenaed by a New York grand jury. He said he believes the jury is investigating "Russian atomic espionage" and he is ready to give it the benefit of his own experience checking an alleged West Coast spy ring before he came to Congress.

In drawing the new security legislation, the Judiciary Subcommitee modified in several respects the draft originally suggested by the Attorney General. With his approval, they previously had eliminated a section which would have sanctioned Government evidence obtained by wire-tapping.

The bill provides that the prosecution of spy cases may begin at any time within 10 years, instead of the present three-year limit.

Attorney General Clark had favored wiping out all time limitations in such cases.

Representative Velde has been asked to appear before the New York grand jury next Wednesday. He said he would be glad to cooperate. He is a member of the Committee on Un-American Activities.

As a G-man, Velde worked on a case involving Steve Nelson, a Pittsburgh Communist, who has been labeled a Red spy by the Un-American Activities unit. The committee has declared that six years ago Nelson got an important atomic energy formula from a "Scientist X" who worked at the University of California's radiation laboratory at Berkeley. The committee has never identified the scientist.

Earlier yesterday the subcommittee opened hearings on anti-subversive legislation with a decision that any witness who refuses to say whether he is a Communist will be barred from testifying. Last year in hearings on such legislation and in espionage investigations by the House Un-American Activities Committee there were uproarious sessions with witnesses who wouldn't talk.

Plea by 2 Groups

Clark Asked To Remove Blacklisting

By The Associated Press

Two groups which bar Communists from membership yesterday asked Attorney General Clark to drop the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy from his list of subversive organizations.

The Americans for Democratic Action and the American Civil Liberties Union, in a joint letter to Clark, said the whole idea of listing "so-called subversive organizations" is both "unsuccessful and distinctly dangerous."

"Affiliation with these organizations is used to damage seriously many innocent and loyal persons," the letter said. "They are made subject to accusation of guilt by association. What is worse, the accusation is made retroactive, since the North American Committee has been defunct for 10 years.

The two groups said the North American Committee changed its name in 1939 to the Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign when the Spanish civil war ended. It operated under that name for "several years."

Shortly after the name change, they said, Communist elements were forced to withdraw from the organization when they were thwarted in an effort to use it to embarass the Western allies in their war with Germany. Germany then had a pact with Russia.

Crisis Demands Zeal of Clergy, Pope Declares

Vatican City, April 29 (AP).—Pope Pius XII said today "mankind is at a decisive turning point of history, before which the clergy cannot remain inert spectators."

The Pointiff spoke to a group of 500 priests, students and alumni of the Pontificial College Leoniano di Anagni, upon the 50th anniversary of its founding.

The Pope urged his listeners to oppose "the spirit of lies that dominates the world with the firm love of truth; the spirit of hate and egoism with feelings of fraernal Christianity and justice, especially toward the needs of the humble classes."

"The present hour," the Pope said, "demands of priests stronger virtue, more ardent zeal and more intrepid firmness."

This source also said there was no discussion of questions of principle and no refusel to accept the earlier conditions.

Sick Leave

Washington school teachers are probably unique among their colleagues of other cities in being doubly penalized for disability or illness. Teachers who fall and break a leg or who inadvertently catch a germ naturally suffer some discomfort or pain. They have medical bills to pay. In this they are like the rest of us. But, being teachers, they also lose their pay for every day of absence and on top of that must hire and pay a substitute to take their place.

The injustice to the individual teacher who has the bad luck to be ill is obvious. Not so often noticed is the impact on the educational system of this medieval practice. Teachers, knowing they will be hit twice in a pocketbook already undernourished by inadequate pay, tend to go on teaching when they ought to be home in bed. Not only is this a risk to their own permanent health, but because of lowered efficiency they cannot do justice to their jobs or to their students.

The purpose of a sick leave program, thus, is not simply to take the individual penalty off sickness. In a quite real sense it is to guarantee that sick teachers stay away from school. The clear logic of a sick-leave system for teachers makes it all the more incredible that the old system has lasted so long. But the end is in sight. A bill drawn up by the Board of Education and approved by the District Commissioners has been introduced by Representative Abernethy. It provides sick leave with pay for all teachers and attendance officers up to a maximum accumulation of 60 days. And the Board of Education is authorized to employ the substitutes and pay them itself. This is an exact prescription to cure the trouble, and should be swiftly approved by Congress.

McCarran's DPs

Senator McCarran is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee on displaced persons legislation, and chairman of a two-man subcommittee on nominations to the DP Commission. In the first and second capacities he has sat motionless since January on the McGrath-Neely and other bills to liberalize the DP law. The other members of the subcommittee, much less the full committee, have had no opportunity to consider and bring out a committee bill to amend the DP Act.

In his third capacity, however, the Senator, with the help of Mr. Donnell, has held three executive sessions on the confirmation of Mr. Carusi as chairman of the DP Commission. At these Mr. Carusi has been grilled not so much on his qualification for office, as on the operations of the present act. On the basis, apparently, of this unprepared and secret testimony, Senator McCarran has now written his own bill to amend the DP law.

The McCarran bill, to give it due credit, would increase the total number of admissible DPs from 205,000 in two years under the present law to 507,000 in four years. This is 100,000 more than the total advocated by the President, the DP Commission, and other proponents of increased DP immigration. The Senator, accordingly, could say he is a better friend of the DPs than anyone else. But any such claim would have to be looked at in context. For the bill would retain the discriminatory and unworkable features of the present, or Revercomb, act. It is true, as Mr. McCarran says, that in this respect some of the early charges—as, for instance, those leveled by the Catholics—have been withdrawn; nevertheless the bill still is restrictive on racial-religious grounds.

Too Much Gag

Secretary Johnson's "Consolidation Directive No. 1" issued on April 14, is a sweeping order intended to end once and for all the public squabbling among the services. Its purpose is good. Verbal mudslinging and knife-throwing neither edify the citizenry nor enhance the reputation of the men who engage in such practices. Much less do they contribute to the firm establishment of the national defense system.

An odor of censorship on all public expression by active, retired, reserve, and even National Guard officers and men pervaded the consolidation directive. Material prepared for publication by the National Guard personnel and civilian employes of the military establishment is subject to review only for security matters. Review is likewise provided for material prepared by retired officers, but in this respect policy and propriety are added to security as criteria. The addition of these two criteria with respect to retired officers only emphasizes the extension of the gag into civilian life.

The old system, as we have had occasion to point out before, put widely differing restraints on retired officers of the various services. Army and Air Force retired officers were required to submit public statements on military matters for prior review. Retired Navy and Marine officers could say what they wanted—but by unwritten law had to accept responsibility for what they said. One result, as in "Howling Mad" Smith's rehash of the Pacific war, was that a Marine officer in retirement could "shoot the works" without rebuke. No Army counterattack of equal vigor got into print because prior review would have ruled it out on the grounds of impropriety in a "unified" system.

This disparity in rules for retired officers ought to be ended—and ended in favor of maximum freedom for all services. We repeat our verdict of last November that "a full measure of criticism is likely to strengthen the foundations of defense by calling attention to weaknesses that might never be corrected if blanketed under censorship." Though they are sometimes full of foibles, retired officers, nevertheless, have very valuable conclusions to draw from their experiences. And these should not be subjected to censorious review by the Pentagon.

Seminar For Congress

Senators Watkins and Donnell have dramatized a difficulty that faces most other Senators in trying to arrive at sound and well-informed decisions on questions of foreign policy. These two Republicans happen to be deeply suspicious of the North Atlantic Treaty. Not being members of the Foreign Relations Committee, however, they are not entitled to question Administration officials in executive session. Of course, they could get their knowledge of the treaty either from prejudice or hearsay, or from columnists or commentators, or from ploughing through the printed records of public hearings. But this was unsatisfactory to them. So they finally took one other course that was open to them: of asking permission to question witnesses at public hearings of the Foreign Relations Committee.

It was not quite fair of Senator Connally, in grudgingly granting their request, to accuse the two Senators of wanting to impede, delay and filibuster. Clearly the committee's hearings would become a farce and a bore if every one of the 96 Senators were allowed to attend the hearings and ask questions. But just as clearly every Senator who is not a member of the committee is entitled to some better method than he now has of informing himself before debating and voting on an issue of such importance as the North Atlantic Treaty. So, for that matter, is the noncommittee membership of the House. There the 418 members not on the Foreign Affairs Committee often have to vote on foreign questions, such as the extension of ECA, with little first-hand knowledge.

It seems to us that it is up to Congress itself, and not to the executive branch, to find a new way of enlightening the entire membership. Congress itself has ample resources for organizing informal seminars on these subjects. The nonpartisan professional staffs of the foreign policy committees of the two houses are well fitted to serve as organizers and moderators. Some of the lecturers at the National War College and the Foreign Service Institute might be invited to speak, as well as Ambassadors recently returned from abroad. If all Senators and Representatives did not have the time to attend these sessions, the Senators could at least send their administrative assistants who, in turn, could help to brief their superiors and answer the questions that pour in insistently from constituents.

As it is today, too many members of Congress feel they are in the dark. And, in consequence, they are apt to develop a sense of grievance which shows itself in irresponsible speeches and votes in the floor debates. We hope the issue will be faced for the sake of the scores of serious and earnest legislators who are groping for greater knowledge of international issues.

Truman's Threat

President Truman seems to have bungled badly in threatening to deny patronage perquisites to Democratic members of Congress who vote against Administration measures. If the first reactions on the Hill are any indication, the threat will impair whatever chance there was for passage of the Administration's labor bill. And this at a time when his lieutenants were committed to a policy of conciliation as the best means of attracting the votes of wavering allies. Mr. Truman showed a lack of leadership which his followers will deplore.

The President's threat was questionable on other than partisan grounds. The general indignation aroused by the President's announcement is due to the fact that it was an open acknowledgment of the role played by patronage in influencing legislative conduct. Other Presidents have not scrupled to wield the patronage club to punish individual members of Congress who have incurred their displeasure. But they have seldom been so, shall we say, forthright. Moreover, by overstepping the line that divides individual from mass coercion of party members President Truman has laid himself open to charges of dictatorship.

The threat, finally, will serve to bring the whole spoils system once again into public discussion. Extension of the merit system has greatly reduced the number of political appointments, but the vestigial remains are still a source of trouble. For example, the Hoover Commission states that more than 22,000 persons in the Postoffice, including first, second and third class postmasters, and some top officials are, in fact, still politically appointed, though selection is limited to a list approved by the Civil Service Commission.

The Postoffice should be taken out of politics, and so should various other appointments subject to senatorial confirmation that are in reality patronage jobs, the incumbents of which are selected by individual Senators. The only sure defense against the abuses of the spoils system lies in its destruction.

Basing Point

By a 4-to-4 vote (Justice Jackson not participating) the United States Supreme Court has upheld the Federal Trade Commission order outlawing the basing point system for rigid steel conduit manufacturers. Because of the split decision the Court issued no opinion—merely affirming the judgment of the lower court. The result is to perpetuate the confusion regarding the legality of pricing practices involving absorption of freight charges.

The FTC contends that in both the cement case decided about a year ago and the steel conduit case, its order was directed against collusive price fixing and that individual use of the basing point method, if undertaken in good faith for the purpose of meeting competition, is not under attack. However, in the steel conduit case the FTC did not base its order merely on charges of conspiracy. It claimed that the manufacturers had violated the antitrust laws, regardless of the conspiracy charges, by using identical delivered prices with the knowledge that all other firms in the field were using the same price formula. This second count in the indictment differentiates the steel conduit case from the cement case. Alarmed businessmen have interpreted it to mean that a single seller may not meet a competitor's price in any market by quoting an identical price, or use a pricing system if he knows that another seller is using that same system.

To be sure, spokesmen for the FTC maintain that this interpretation is incorrect. Illegality exists, they assert, only when price uniformities are so persistent and rigid, so based on a general determination to act together, as to have the effect of a price-fixing conspiracy. Nevertheless, the decision in the steel conduit case admittedly makes it easier to prove the existence of tacit collusion and causes businessmen to fight shy of any kind of pricing practice that results in identical delivered prices.

Since the Supreme Court failed to clarify the important issue raised in the steel conduit case, legislative action is being urged either to revise the antitrust laws or, as an alternative, temporarily to ban FTC suits against basing-point price systems, if undertaken in good faith. Of course, a moratorium on suits would not solve the problems raised by the basing-point system, but it would prevent hasty changes in existing legislation that might not be in the public interest.

There is little hope that Congress will find time at the present session to grapple with the complicated issues raised by pricing practices. Although revision of laws affecting pricing policies and competition is clearly needed, as Senator Johnson says, to solve the problems that are now worrying industry, proposals for thoroughgoing, permanent revision would lead to prolonged discussion and heated arguments. The preferable alternative, therefore, is to pass pending measures temporarily banning FTC orders against noncollusive, delivered price systems and freight absorption. Businessmen would then be freed from harassing doubts about the legality of their pricing policies and the way would be left open for permanent legislation later on, dealing comprehensively with unsolved problems of competition and pricing.

Gallinger Change

Dr. Alvin R. Sweeney is a loyal public servant who has tried to do an impossible job as superintendent of Gallinger Hospital. Many criticisms have been leveled at the administration of Gallinger, but there is little wrong with the administration, or, for that matter, with Gallinger's physical facilities, that adequate appropriations would not cure. Dr. Sweeney, to be sure, has lacked the personal dynamism to dramatize the plight of the municipal hospital before the public and Congress. But he has labored hard to maintain a respectable level of hospital services on budgets that first have been limited by the Commissioners and then slashed by Congress. The best indication that he has succeeded, despite the institutional poverty in which he has worked, is the fact that Gallinger recently received a high rating on the inspection undertaken by the American Board of Surgeons.

It is too bad that budgetary restrictions prevented the consolidation of the posts of superintendent and chief of staff into a single job paying $15,000 a year as proposed by Health Officer Ruhland. This consolidation might have enabled Gallinger to attract a top-flight outside administrator. As it is, Dr. Ruhland has done well-to suggest the promotion of the present medical superintendent and chief medical officer.

Nothing short of drastic salary revisions, of course, is going to help the problem of holding present personnel and attracting new talent. Also, Gallinger's position as a municipally-supported hospital will continue to render it subject to demands not experienced by many private institutions. Fortunately, Gallinger has an excellent working relationship with Washington medical schools, and this is a big asset in maintaining the quality of service and offering opportunities for research. Beyond this, Gallinger's many inadequacies are synonymous with the other defects in a voteless community which has no control except the knife over its own finances.

Pact's Obligations

I am no little alarmed at the expedition with which the Administration, through its Secretary of State, is pressing the Congress to ratify the North Atlantic Pact and to appropriate billions of the taxpayers' money to arm those European states who constitute its members.

Simultaneously, the State Department is seeking to have Russia lift the Berlin blockade which, if successful, would, in a large measure, if not entirely, obviate the necessity for either the North Atlantic Pact or the enormous outlay for military aid.

Secretary Acheson in a statement before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee stressed what he deems to be the "basic purpose of the treaty." In one breath he states that "an armed attack upon any party would so threaten the national security of the other parties as to be in effect an armed attack upon all." In the next breath he asserts "This naturally does not mean that the United States would automatically be at war if one of the other signatory nations were the victim of an armed attack." Yet, Secretary Acheson advances a step further and says: "The obligation of this Government under Article V would be to take promptly the action it deemed necessary to restore and maintain the security of the North Atlantic area."

How does the Secretary of State differentiate between the terms "automatically" and "promptly"? Does it not occur to him that the term "necessary" is a very feeble yardstick by which to measure the extent of the obligation of the United States to participate in another war in Europe if one of the signatory nations is attacked?

"Dogs For Science"

It is amazing how little the public knows of the horrors and torture of vivisection. Even your editor writes complaisantly on April 27, "Everything is done for the animals' comfort." Listen to this over the signature of Dr. George L. Crile quoted from his book Surgical Shock:

"I tarred some of them (148 dogs) and set fire to them. I cut others open and poured boiling water into the cavity. Held their paws over Bunsen burners, crushed the most sensitive organs of the male dog and broke every bone in its paws with a mallet. In others I poked out their eyes with a tool and then scraped the empty sockets."

Nothing is said about an anesthetic. And what about when they came out of an anesthetic if any was used?

MRS. H. D. ALBIN,
Secretary, Anti-Vivisection Society.

One of your April 25 correspondents relates that her husband was a member of a biology class in which a "live dog was cut up without an anesthetic." Husband has probably gotten away with some pretty tall stories in this family if your correspondent actually believes that one. DOCTOR.

They or their child might be next. Please don't fight this humane effort to help fight disease. MRS. C. F. SNEAD.

Arlington Farms

In answer to the April 26 letter by Norma Faust about the forthcoming eviction of Government girls from Arlington Farms, I would like to say that it appears to me that the Government has at last used the strategy to solve the problem.

The reason that there is so much unemployment among the veterans just might possibly be that the women who came here during the war to take over should go home and let the men work for a while. The same patriotism that brought the girls here should take them home without any feeling of injustice. The Government is not able to support such projects as Arlington Farms, and many other such enterprises, and is just now beginning to realize that the war is over. M. C. R.

Forgotten Draftees

We are a part of the 25,000 men taken into the Army during the brief effective period of the peacetime draft. Many of us were rejected for service during the war because of physical reasons.

Several years passed, the war ended, the draft expired, and we, in turn, became settled in our jobs with ideas of getting married. But along came the peacetime draft. It was hard to leave our familiar way of life, but we did so willingly because it seemed that our country needed us.

However, Army appropriations have since been cut and it has been found necessary to take steps to keep within the budget. Selective Service Boards have closed up, and there are plans to decrease Army manpower by 30,000 or 40,000. And with the current signs of recession, younger men are flocking to the recruiting centers in such great numbers that they can afford the almost forgotten luxury of screening enlistments and picking the best.

Considering all the circumstances, would it not seem fair and just were Congress to amend its legislation, and let us off early; for instance, after one year's service, or, better still, when we reach the age of 26 and have completed a determined, smaller amount of months?

Supercarrier And Service Rivalry

The recent arbitrary hasty action of the Secretary of Defense in halting construction of the Navy's new carrier, and your April 26 editorial briefly dismissing the problem as closed, can only cause misgivings among the serious-minded citizens of this country. Far from being closed, the so-called "solution" of the matter has set a precedent for politico-military log-rolling by any two of the services combined against the third.

Suppose that the Air Force and the Navy decide that the heaviest tanks planned by the ground forces are too difficult to transport in aircraft or landing craft, and that they decide to set the maximum weight of a tank at 30 tons. Voting together they can overrule the Army general in his own sphere.

Similarly, the Navy and the Army could team up on the proposition that the B-36 is too slow for strategic bombing. Acting in unison they could require the Air Force to concentrate on lighter, faster types of aircraft which could do double duty as strategic and tactical bombers.

Or the Air Force and the Navy might decide that the use of guided missiles lay in their spheres and that the development and use of such weapons by the ground forces should be curtailed. Note, in this connection, that the V-2 was developed by the German ground forces.

Good administration, as well as effective military command, requires that authority be delegated. Having determined the allocation of resources to the various services, and having assigned each its functions, the method of carrying out the assignments should be left to the men trained in each sphere.

I submit that this principle has been gravely violated. The Navy had substituted the large carrier for certain other projects in its budget. Now it is told in detail how to carry out its assignments, that its best judgment concerning the exercise of sea power is wrong and must be modified to conform to the ideas of persons trained in other types of warfare.

In addition to the administrative principles which have been violated, certain important technical points have been ignored:

1. Atomic propulsion will be feasible for ships and submarines long before it becomes practical for aircraft operation, due to the weight of equipment and radiation shields. Such power plants may revolutionize naval warfare, because there will be no need for refueling the ships. Space now used for bunker fuel would become available for aircraft fuels, guided missiles and other armament.

2. There have been no experiments in refueling long-range bombers from ship-based tanker planes. Such mobile refueling bases are an important weapon of which we and friendly powers have a monopoly. Thus far it has been ignored in our planning, due to interservice rivalries. Instead we have relied on fixed island bases, the true "sitting ducks" of future warfare.

3. Air-sea rescue operations may become extremely important for maintaining the morale of bomber crews. Large carriers can carry out such operations despite heavy seas and other adverse weather conditions.

4. By its mere existence a large carrier would neutralize substantial enemy forces that would have to be deployed defensively in anticipation of attack or utilized in extensive search and attack operations. Such forces would not be available for offensive operations against our cities and production centers.

The last three years have given us not unification, but triplification tending toward chaos. Let us hope that this process can be arrested before it leads this Nation blindly into another gigantic Pearl Harbor, after the people have been lulled into a false sense of security by fantastic claims put forth by the exponents of a particular weapon or means of defense.

Marriage Bar Breakdown

By Malvina Lindsay

Teachers' Rights

Those back of the recent chain letter attack on teaching as an "old maids' profession" knew their psychology if not their current events. Whether crackpot or subversive in motive, they were clever enough to strike at the romantic yearnings of young people at a time when marriage—and early marriage at that—was at a peak of popularity.

Those in charge of the present recruiting drive to relieve the Nation's desperate teacher shortage should show equal psychological acumen. They might well stage a widely advertised campaign to lift all remaining bars against employment of married women as teachers. At least they could point to some promising beginnings in breaking down the old tradition of celibacy in the teaching field.

Teaching, like most other pursuits, is weakening before the tidal wave of women workers—a wave given momentum by the war. The war and postwar shortage of teachers opened opportunities to married women in some of the most hidebound school districts. Faced with empty schoolrooms, some school authorities got around moldy restrictions by putting married teachers on a long-time substitute basis. Now it is believed parents in many areas are ready to change these inherited, antiquated restrictions.

THE 1940 census reports 22 per cent of women teachers married, "with husband present." That was before the empty classroom problem developed. The percentage of married women teaching is undoubtedly much higher now. No State-wide legislation against married teachers exists. Three States and the District of Columbia prohibit dismissal of teachers on account of marital status. In 13 States courts have held that restrictions on marriage of teachers are against public policy and therefore invalid.

The married teacher meets her discrimination chiefly in local school board rulings. These are rooted to an extent in economics but more generally in community tradition and in the prejudices of elderly conservative citizens who usually comprise school boards. Often these rules prevail because nobody has taken the trouble to have them changed.

Up to the beginning of the war it was a prevailing habit even in cities not to employ married women as teachers. A study in 1940-41 by the National Education Association showed that in city school systems, 58 per cent did not appoint married women as new teachers, and that 80 per cent of these had definite rules against the practice. No recent studies in this field have been made, but in many places the desperate need for teachers has upset this custom.

But discriminations against married teachers need to be broken down at a more rapid rate if teacher training schools are not to be depopulated—as seems their present trend. Young women of today won't enter a profession that puts a premium on celibacy—or if they do they will practice it superficially as a stopgap to marriage.

THERE IS some fear now that a tightening in employment would revive the cry of the 1930s for all married women workers to "go home where they belong." This could encourage restrictions against married teachers. But several current trends make this unlikely. One is that the teacher shortage seems destined to continue indefinitely, and that no problems of competition, least of all with men, are likely to arise.

Another is the growing emphasis in all fields of work on personality and human relations. In teaching, this is especially important. Hence experiences, including marriage and motherhood, that enrich teachers' lives, may be increasingly encouraged. The old feeling that a teacher should dedicate her entire life to the schoolroom and the community is giving way to the idea that she should have a fuller outside life of her own.

As married teachers become generally accepted, more girls will undertake thorough training for teachers on the basis of a lifetime career. And married teachers who retire from work to look after small children will be able to go back to their careers—with some retraining necessarily—to make valuable contributions out of their widened experience.

In fact some social scientists see the future working pattern of the American woman as involving two shifts—one before her children come, one after they get old enough not to require constant supervision. Teaching should offer an ideal field for such a classroom-plus-field-work career.

Retiring Congressmen

Now that there are many new and younger Congressmen in our Capitol, why don't they consider and offer a bill to retire members at the age of 64?

Our armed forces officers and men are compelled to accept this rule and order, no matter how efficient. Business corporations realize and consider that an employe's abilities begin to depreciate on or about 40-45.

Why must our democracy be impaired by the stubborness of members long past the age of just consideration of the needs of the Nation? M. C. MUNN.

A Communication

Socialized Medicine—A British Appraisal

By An English Doctor

OFFICIALLY the new British health service is said to be working well; unofficially it is known that all is not well. Basically the principle of the act—a comprehensive, health service for the nation—is as sound as ever, but the practical application of the principle leaves much to be desired.

The first thing that happened when the act came into operation in July, 1948, was a rush by the public to obtain the services which the act laid down. But these just did not exist.

The demand for hospital beds also increased out of all proportion to the normal applications and the out-patient departments became overcrowded and confused. During the war the hospitals were not able to increase their accommodation, or facilities, and because of post-war austerity nothing has been done since. Hospitals get no priority for supplies. There was no increase therefore in the number of beds and there was a shortage of medical and nursing staff. The latter are still giving us all a headache.

This, combined with the changed attitude of the public because paying for something which cannot be supplied immediately on demand, is definately having a bad effect on the working of the scheme. A special feature of the act was the provision of health centers. These will no doubt come in time, but so far not one exists—hence doctors' surgeries are also overrun.

IN FEBRUARY, the Minister of Health announced to the hospitals in Great Britain that a substantial cut amounting to some 9,500,000 pounds had to be made in hospital expenditure for the current year. This announcement followed a debate in the House of Commons when the minister asked for an increased vote of 58 million pounds for the hospital and health services to cover the first year's expenditure. The first vote for this service was 155 million pounds and now, on the minister's own showing, the total estimated expenditure for the year of hospital and health expenditure under the new act is 213 million pounds.

The estimated total above does not include the recommendations of the Spens Committee on the salaries to be paid to consultants and specialists, and this will be a very heavy item for all hospitals. They are to be back-dated to July, 1948. In one hospital group it is estimated at 48,000 pounds out of a total estimated expenditure of 451,000 pounds and in the majority of hospitals the proportion will be about the same, namely 10 per cent.

WE HAD the same comments that you now hear in the United States made in this country by many authorities when it was known that the Ministry of Health were moving in the direction of taking over the voluntary hospitals. It was said that these hospitals were an expression of individual initiative and that under the new plan nothing would be done to interfere with the valuable services which these hospitals were rendering to the public. But things do not work out this way in practice. There is no doubt at all in my mind that the institution of compulsory health insurance would wipe out the voluntary hospitals and it is difficult to suggest a compromise.

I do not think I am exaggerating the position when I say that although the Act itself laid down the basis of a good hospital and health service, the way in which it has been worked is very far from satisfactory. There is too much regimentation from central authorities which leaves little or no initiative by the bodies working under them who are concerned with the actual management of the hospital and relevant services.

Naturally in any national service the voluntary hospitals will play, and will want to play, their share but it is difficult for them to do so unless the provisions of the act are such as will leave them some initiative to develop with the advance of medicine and scientific progress in other directions.

FROM discussions I had when in America on the Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill, there seems to be an attempt to effect a compromise which, although on paper seems to be a satisfactory solution of the problem, would in practice be no solution at all. Before the introduction of the National Health Service bill in Great Britain a scheme was submitted to Parliament by the coalition government advocating the coordination of hospital and health services, and I personally still feel that properly organized, this was the better method of bringing about a unified hospital service. It created no political difficulties whereas the introduction of the National Health Service Act 1946 brought about a cleavage between the various political parties, and was definitely made a political issue.

This was very unfortunate for we have long felt in Great Britain that a uniform hospital system was really necessary; that the voluntary hospitals had reached a stage in their history when public assistance, both financial and moral, was not sufficient to continue their existence as voluntary hospitals, but it was thought that with state aid for services rendered in the way of national and semi-national services—e. g. venereal diseases, maternity and child welfare, examination of school children, tuberculosis, etc., which services had been accepted by the voluntary hospitals because the state had not provided for them—would have met the case.

UNFORTUNATELY, however, revolution took the place of evolution and the act of 1946 was passed. Already, as previously stated, the minister has demanded a cut of 9,500,000 pounds in the hospital and health services, and the hospital and local authorities concerned are now trying to work out where and how these cuts can be made. Many authorities adopt the attitude that their estimates were based on actual figures of work carried out in the past and because of this they are unable themselves to make the requisite cuts. A number of authorities have joined together and told the minister that if he wishes these cuts to be made, without affecting the welfare of the patients, he should state categorically where and how the cuts are to be made. The cuts range from 3 to 14 per cent of maintenance costs and as high as 50 per cent of capital expenditures.

This new announcement of the minister is a very serious condemnation of the hospitals or the minister. Either the former have budgeted far more expenditure than they need, or the hospital and health services are costing in practice more than the minister himself estimated in both his first and second estimates. When it was announced that the estimated total cost of hospital and health services under the new act would be 150 million pounds the hospital world was astounded because it was known that it would be impossible to institute a service of the kind required on this figure.

In those early days it was estimated by those who had authority to speak that it would cost at least 200 millions pounds. As you will see it has reached 213 million pounds and there is very little doubt that, in spite of the minister's announcement calling for the cut, that the total for the first year will be something like 250 million pounds if not more. And only a few additional beds have been added for this additional expenditure.

I am convinced that the nationalization of hospital and health services is not for the benefit of the public unless it is arranged in such a way that the hospitals can best serve the public and not be made the tool of party propaganda. I am very much afraid that we in this country have fallen into this error. Your problems are very much the same as ours in this country. We feel that there should be a unified hospital system but that the unification should be effected by the hospitals themselves without any interference by, but with financial support from the Government. This interference inevitably means control and it is this aspect of the problem which is one which the hospitals in this country have fought for many many years.

It is essential to hospital service that the personal contact should be observed all the way through, and one can only get this by personal contact of the authorities concerned, and not through a central organization many, many miles away. Our act attempts to overcome the difficulties of remote control by means of regional boards and hospital management committees, but the urge to control from the center is very much in evidence; and the regional boards in turn adopt the same view in relation to the hospital management committees.

One of the greatest objections raised against the service is the waste of time in getting decisions from the central authorities. Whereas before the act the committee of each hospital and the chief executive officers were able to give quick decisions because they were on the spot, under the act they have not the authority to decide upon more than ordinary every day-to-day routine matters. Everything else has to be referred to the next higher authority, and in turn these authorities have to refer some matters still higher up the chain.

One thing that is very noticeable is the loss of the human or personal touch. This is always the danger of rules and regulations, and I fear will not be overcome in our new service. I am much afraid the hospitals are going to consider administrative efficiency and keeping within the rules as being of far greater importance than personal attention to the patient.

$75,011 to Match

School Health Bill Carries Fund for D. C.

The District's annual share of Federal funds would be $75,011 under the national school health bill which passed the Senate yesterday.

To receive the sum, however, the city government would have to put up a similar amount for the program of diagnosis and correction of physical and mental defects in children between 5 and 17.

Health Officer Dr. George C. Ruhland last night hailed the bill as "possibly a huge assist to our presently part-time school medical inspection services."

He said he had not yet mapped out a program to put into effect under the national measure until it is determined how much spending money the District might be able to provide.

The bi-partisan sponsored measure, sent to the House for action, would provide a 35-million-dollar outlay to the States, Territories and the District.

Maryland would be eligible for $329,815 in Federal money by matching the amount from local revenues, while Virginia would receive $63,120 by putting up $661,009 locally.

Grants to each State jurisdiction, under the measure, are determined by a formula based on total child population and the relative per capita income of the State.

gant panaceas ill-suited to our city's conditions."

4. Desire to fill every piece of open ground with some structure.

"Because the amount of taxable land in the District is shrinking and so the real estate tax basis is physically growing less, there has arisen a popular movement to recapture for taxable so-called improvements, all sizable open spaces and to resist the creation of more open spaces. This proposal disregards the fact that the taxable values which do exist . . . are largely the result of adequate and wise retention or development of open spaces."

5. Shortage of good, safe and sanitary housing for the lower income groups.

"Probably no city has had a greater need and none has done so little to meet that need," General Grant said. "The lack of such housing is undoubtedly largely responsible for the degradation of many persons, the increasing cost to the city for crime, juvenile delinquency, disease, insanity and dependency. The only remedy so far proposed or authorized is urban redevelopment; to make this possible again, understanding popular support is needed."

6. Public apathy to what should be done.

'We need here beyond all else an active interest of the citizenry to see that what ought to be done is done, for the public good; not just spasmodic outbursts of resistance when someone's shoe pinches.

"A critic has said to me," said General Grant, "that our commission's plans lack the power to inspire; that, perhaps because they are based on common sense and a conservative desire to keep within what can practically be accomplished, they impel no thrills or excitement. Well, if excitement is desired, the Traffic Department can produce it without appreciable cost by requiring motor vehicles to drive on the left side on every other street and counter-clockwise around every other circle."

In connection with his discussion of zoning problems, General Grant declared, "Architects sometimes appear on behalf of their clients, representing special interests.

"Although your chapter has participated patriotically on many occasions in regard to other matters, I have yet to see a committee or even a single architect, or any other citizen group, appear before the Zoning Commission on behalf of the public interests which are being invaded."

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Baldwin's Case History

THE DECISION of Senator Raymond Baldwin of Connecticut to leave the Senate for a place on the Supreme Court of his State has been reported as though it were a clever political trick "put over" by scheming politicians. That is characteristic of those who become completely immersed in the atmosphere of Washington where the preoccupation with who gets what and why seems at times to exclude everything else.

Childs

It is much more than that. As the case history of a Senator who came to Washington with a conscientious resolve to be a good public servant it deserves serious consideration.

On the day he left for Hartford to confer with Governor Chester Bowles about the appointment to the court, Baldwin got a letter from a wealthy Connecticut Republican on vacation in Florida. The letter berated him for not paying more attention to his constituents and for certain stands that have classified him as at least a moderate liberal.

To Baldwin, weary of the incessant demands made on him, fed up with the bickering and quarreling, driven to a sense of futility by the conflicting pulls from so many different directions, the letter was a last straw. It seemed to sum up the mean and carping attitude of those who contribute nothing to the common welfare and then berate overworked officeholders for failing to achieve the millennium.

THE BALDWIN case history is important because, I am convinced, a great many conscientious members of Congress feel the same way. This is true in both parties, but it applies particularly to the Republicans who have spent so many years in opposition.

It does not apply, of course, to such stalwarts as Senator Homer Capehart of Indiana. They know very well what the National Association of Manufacturers wants out of Congress, and what the NAM wants, the Capehart is also want. They are living under the comfortable conviction of a bygone era that what is good for a few businessmen must inevitably be good for everyone.

Nor does it apply to such professional oppositionists, as Senator Styles Bridges, who seem to find ample reward in merely shouting, "no." Bridges has a wonderful range of "no," extending from the angry and self-righteous "no!" to the scornful and contemptuous, "no, don't bother me with such damfool talk."

His idea of responsibility and party loyalty was illustrated when Baldwin tried to telephone him from Hartford to explain why he had accepted the judicial appointment. Bridges sent back word that he was having dinner with Governor Bowles and therefore too busy to talk with Senator Baldwin. This was the contemptuous, subtly humorous "no."

Baldwin's decision should be the occasion for some soul-searching within his own party. Instead, he is being treated like a disloyal schoolboy who must be ostracized for refusing to throw rocks at the rival gang.

At a public dinner in Hartford several nights after he accepted the judgeship he was loudly booed by members of his own party. In the Senate his fellow Republicans have set out to give him the works with the result that he probably will resign his Senate seat long before the December date when he takes the judgeship.

BALDWIN was not anxious in 1946 to run for the Senate. He was persuaded by party leaders in Connecticut who knew his reputation as a vote-getter. As Governor, Baldwin had done a great deal to restore the waning prestige of the GOP in his State.

Once he was in Washington the party took over and Baldwin's friends found themselves pushed out of influential party office. That was apparently in anticipation of a GOP victory in '48 and the regulars wanted to be ready to hop on the gravy train.

I know Democrats suffering from the same kind of battle fatigue that made Baldwin decide to leave active political life. It is a serious reflection on the democratic process.

Considered even on the level of a political trick, the Baldwin case shows up the GOP. Bowles knew that for years Baldwin had wanted the judgeship and so at the exact psychological moment he made the offer. For a politician rated contemptuously as an amateur, that was pretty good going. The Republican Party has much more to learn if it is ever to take responsible authority again.

cision was a "victory for democracy."

Assistant Secretary of the Interior C. Girard Davidson said last night, when informed of the NCPPC action:

"I am very glad the commission has seen fit to take this action, which is in keeping with the President's civil rights program. This leaves it squarely up to the Recreation Board whether or not they will eliminate segregation in recreation here."

Asked whether the commission's action was taken because of the recently announced policy of the Interior Department on nonsegregated parklands here, General Grant said yesterday:

"No we are simply taking these designations off the map." He said the resolution "explains itself."

General Grant said that he did not think the action of the NCPPC would materially affect the disposition of Interior Solicitor Mastin G. White's opinion, now before Attorney General Tom Clark, in which White stated that the Federal Government could impose conditions, including a ban against segregation on use of 62 playground properties purchased with Capper-Crampton funds. The Recreation Board and the District corporation counsel, Vernon West, sharpley disagreed.

"That opinion was always a matter of control of areas, rather than a race question with us," said General Grant.

The NCPPC action puts the Recreation Department squarely in the middle on the segregated playground question. Last October, the Board of Education declared that the problem of segregated recreation in Washington school facilities is not its concern and told the Recreation Board to do what it liked with school space.

The Recreation Board has scheduled a meeting for May 10 at which it is to consider the problem of maintaining or ending segregation on school meeting facilities.

Last month, the Recreation Board declared as "open units" 18 local tennis courts, situated on Federal park lands, which previously had been operated on a segregated basis.

The action was taken in compliance with an Interior Department order.

Harry S. Wender, chairman of the District Recreation Department, has consistently maintained that the segregated system of recreation which the board operates was based on a law which adopted the NCPPC plan of recreation, providing dual facilities for whites and Negroes.

The Recreation Board now administers between 110 and 115 recreation units, both for whites and Negroes, during a given year. All are affected by the NCPPC action.

Witness Tells Senate Probers He Saw Army Agent Kick Nazis

By the United Press

James J. Bailey, of Pittsburgh, a former civilian Army employe, said yesterday that he saw a "sadistic" Army agent slap and kick Nazi storm troopers accused of taking part in the notorious Malmedy massacre.

Judge Gordon Simpson of the Texas Supreme Court, testified, however, that he found no legal proof of brutality to the Nazis while investigating for former Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall.

The two men were witnesses before a Senate Armed Services subcommittee looking into charges that Army interogators used third-degree methods to obtain confessions from the Germans.

The accused were tried for participating in the machine-gun killing of 80 or more American prisoners of war in a field near Malmedy, Belgium, during the battle of the Bulge in 1944. All the defendants were convicted and 43 were sentenced to death. All but six of the death sentences have since been commuted to prison terms. Royall, who has since resigned, ordered a stay of execution for the six pending completion of the Senate inquiry.

Bailey Wrote to Senator

Bailey had written Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), who is sitting in on the investigation, that United States Army agents used "starvation, brutality and threats of bodily harm and death" to extract confessions from the accused. He said he became disgusted and quit his job after months of taking down such "confessions."

Yesterday he pinned the chief blame for the alleged brutality on three men, two of whom, he said, themselves came to the United States to escape Nazi persecution.

He accused First Lieut. William R. Perl, a former Vienna attorney, of having a "sadistic brutal streak." He charged that Perl "slapped and kneed in the groin" some of the German prisoners in his presence. He said Perl had spent four or five years in a German concentration camp and "I don't think he belonged on that investigating team."

The other men, he said, were Harry Thon and Frank Steiner, both civilians of European birth. He quoted Steiner as saying the Nazis had killed his mother and he delighted in abusing them.

Calls Translations Incorrect

Bailey said Steiner's translations of the prisoners' confessions were contrary to the known facts in the case. He said Steiner and Perl obtained 75 per cent of the confessions. Bailey said he had no sympathy for the Germans but that a few competent police officers could have made them confess with legal methods.

Simpson headed a three-man investigating team which studied the Malmedy case at Royall's request after defense attorneys charged serious irregularities in the prosecution's methods. He admitted there were irregularities but said the only evidence he could find was that mock trials wre used to force confessions, plus some reports that blankets were taken from the prisoners.

"The methods in general were essentially fair," he said. He added he was convinced by evidence of the guilt of 12 Germans sentenced to death, but in view of the questionable means used to get confessions, his commission had recommended that the 12 sentences be commuted to life imprisonment.

Visit of Ship Irks Students At St. John's

Annapolis, Md., April 29 (AP).—Eight St. John's College undergraduates formed a picket line at the United States Naval Academy's main gate today in protest over the visit here of a Spanish training ship.

The students said they had been barred from the academy grounds proper.

Picketers carried signs reading, "Franco is a dictator just like Stalin, "Franco Spain is Fascist," "U. S. Navy contradicts U. S. foreign policy."

The students were protesting the visit of the Juan Sebastian Elcano, carrying 49 Spanish naval cadets, 12 apprentices and a crew of 23 officers and men. They arrived here Sunday.

President John S. Kieffer of St. John's said the students "represent nobody but themselves."

'However, the college recognizes freedom of expression. But student opinion as a whole seems to disapprove of the action.

"I feel that the Naval Academy officials are in no way responsible for whatever aspects of high foreign policy are involved in the visit of the ship.

Academy officials declined formal comment.

Wednesday, the captain of the Elcano, Comdr. Alvaro Urzaiz Y De Silva, said the ship's United States visit was a "good will trip" and had no connection with the political prospect of a United Nations debate about the same time concerning policy toward Spain.

Participants in the recognition program will include Bishop Charles W. Flint of the Washington area of the denomination; Dr. Harry C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland; Dr. Fred C. Dinner to Open Baptist Drive For $600,000

Members of the First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw., will launch a $600,000 building fund drive at a "loyalty dinner" at 7 p. m. Monday at the National Guard Armory.

Senator Robert S. Kerr (D., Okla.) and Dr. Oscar Johnson, president of the Baptist World Alliance and pastor of Third Baptist Church, St. Louis, Mo., will be the main speakers at the dinner.

Representative J. Percy Priest (D., Tenn.), a deacon of the church and general campaign chairman, will preside, the Rev. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor, has announced.

Long overcrowded in its present 60-year-old building, the congregation has been making plans to erect a million-dollar plant on the same location. For eight years two worship services each Sunday have been necessary to care for the growing congregation. Membership has increased from 772 in 1936, when Dr. Pruden became pastor, to 2000 at the present time.

Three residences adjoining the building on 16th st. have been taken over for use by the Sunday school, which has doubled its enrollment in the past four years.

"Every phase of our church life and program is hampered by inadequate and inappropriate space," Dr. Pruden said in speaking of the need for a new church. 'Until we build an adequate and suitable home for our church, we cannot fully discharge our responsibility to our church and to the multitudes living in Washington temporarily who look to us for spiritual leadership," he declared.

The present campaign will seek pledges for $600,000 to be paid by 1952, when the church will celebrate its sesquicentennial. Successful completion of the drive would make it possible to begin construction of the first unit of the building by 1950, Dr. Pruden said.

Members of the building fund committee in charge of the campaign are: Dr. Thomas R. Wilson, chairman; Mrs. Grover C. Carr, E. Hilton Jackson, Miss Elizabeth Clark, Mrs. J. K. Lauderdale, Representative Priest, Henry Riley, Alvin O. West, Carey Shaw, John H. Shouse, Mrs. Lamar Caudle, Dr. J. M. Dawson, the Rev. R. Edward Dowdy, assistant pastor; Henry W. Clark and Charles B. McInnis.

McCloy May Join Allied Commission

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

World Bank President John J. McCloy is seriously considering an offer to become the American member of the Allied High Commision for Germany, it was learned yesterday.

McCloy, who returned Thursday from a three-week trip to England, had a two-hour conference yesterday with Secretary of State Dean Acheson, during which the post of high commissioner was discussed at length.

It has been known for several weeks that McCloy was the most prominent candidate for the delicate job, and in the talk with Acheson he reportedly inquired about its responsibilities, prospective duration, and freedom of action.

To Replace Military Chiefs

At their meeting here earlier this month, Secretary Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman agreed to replace their present military governors in the Big Three occupation zones of western Germany with a three-man civilian high commission, which would supervise activities of the proposed west German republic.

Since then, there has been added to this situation the proposed talks with Russia on over-all German problems, which could conceivably alter the Western Allies' plans for Germany.

Whatever the outcome of such a conference, some form of German high commission is in the offing.

President of the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development since March 17, 1947, McCloy has been sought for the German post because of a wide range of appropriate talents.

Helped Draw Plans

A World War II Assistant Secretary of War under Henry L. Stimson, McCloy was principal liaison officer with other departments, with unusual ability for resolving conflicting views. As a military specialist, he helped draw plans for governing occupied German territory, aided by a knowledge of Germany gained as a lawyer handling German sabotage claims arising out of World War I.

Appointment as a high commissioner, however, would undoubtedly mean a major financial sacrifice in comparison to his present post—$30,000 a year, tax free—and probably would push McCloy into the public wrangling he has sought to avoid.

The only comment a State Department spokesman would make on the McCloy-Acheson talks was that they discussed possibilities of World Bank aid to President Truman's "Point 4" program for helping the world's backward areas; financial conditions in France and England, and the physical condition of Ambassador to Great Britain Lewis W. Douglas.

Douglas, recovering from a fishing injury to his eye, is married to the sister of McCloy's wife.

'Suh, We Do Hearby Secede From the Union'

The Washington Post

BELOW THE MASON-DIXON LINE—To celebrate their traditional "Old South Weekend," members of Alpha Nu Chapter of Kappa Alpha Fraternity went through the act of seceding from the Union yesterday. Members of the social frat at George Washington University were garbed in the gray of Lee's troops and brought along their Southern belles. Reading the proclamation are (from left) Jean Cleary, Bill Tupman, Tom Peters, John Jaynes and Rita Bie. Earlier, they placed a wreath at Lee's Mansion

Wilson Warns On Overstock Of War Goods

By the United Press

Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric Co. and wartime vice chairman of the War Production Board, last night cautioned against too much stockpiling of planes, ships and guns.

In a speech prepared for the annual banquet of the American Society of Naval Engineers, he said that production "know-how" is about the only thing worth stockpiling in peacetime.

Discussing the Marshall Plan for European recovery, Wilson said it would turn out to be "the most ridiculous and tragic grandstand play in history if it should be pursued in a fashion so extravagant that "we end up by crippling our own economy with a crushing tax structure."

"There are some things that even our own beloved country cannot afford, and we should remind ourselves of that once in a while," he said.

"That is the kind of stern and perhaps unpopular service which industry is best fitted to render the country, because businessmen are less likely than soldiers and statesmen and politicians to forget that there is always a day of reckoning and that arithmetic is not subject to change by international agreement."

Red Leaders Wreck Science As Nazis Did, Goudsmit Says

The government's wrecking of science which occurred in Nazi Germany is now being repeated today in Russia and is in danger of happening here, one of the Nation's top atomic physicists said here last night.

Dr. S. A. Goudsmit, of the Brookhaven National Laboratory and chief of a wartime War Department mission to investigate German progress on the A-bomb, made this assertion before some 200 physicists at sessions of the American Physical Society.

"Frustration" brought on by Nazi interference dropped German science from its former first rank to a position of fifth or sixth today, Goudsmit, co-discover of the "electronic spin," told a Cosmos Club symposium on "Science and the Climate of Opinion" sponsored by the Federation of American Scientists.

Sees "Symptoms" in U. S.

"I believe similar things are occurring in Russia," he said. "Just as the Germans decried things because they were Jewish or non-Aryan, the Russians are today decrying things because they are not in agreement with dialectic materialism."

As for this country, Dr. Goudsmit said, "There are symptoms which show that the same kind of thing can happen here. We must be on the lookout for bad control of science. We must be at all times alert so that not even in our subconscious—even if it doesn't say thus and so in our contracts—will we allow the idea that we are being told what we can do."

Dr. Richard H. Shryock, until recently director of the American Council of Learned Societies, discussed effects on science of the "climate of opinion," including that kind which holds to anti-vivisection.

Opposition to dissection of the human body, he said, was "peculiarly Anglo-Saxon" and he suggested it might be due to "another moral thing called prudishness. The English-speaking people have been so afraid of exposure of the human body we have had to drape our Greek statues even."

The antivivisection movement is still today "a threat not to be laughted off," he said.

In an interview afterwards, Dr. Shryock, who is professor of history at the University of Pennsylvanit, and a bacteriologist, characterized antianimal-vivisectionists as "pure sentimentalists."

"They talk of cruelty to animals," he said. "They never think of the cruelty of denying life to thousands of children who would be dying every year from diphtheria alone, for example. The vaccine for diphtheria could not have been developed without vivisection."

Anti-vivisections, he declared, are people who "demand protection of animal lives at the expense of human lives. If they had their way we would avoid animal suffering at the expense of human suffering.

Savings Bond Drive Opening Changed to Monday, May 16

By The Associated Press

The "kick off" of the National Savings Bond Drive, originally set for May 15, a Sunday night, will take place the following night instead, the Treasury announced last night.

Ministers of Independence, Mo., President Truman's home town, had protested against ceremonies planned for Sunday both in that community and in Kansas City.

The Independence Ministerial Alliance explained it is the Sunday on which high school baccalaureate services are held.

The four radio networks were scheduled to broadcast the campaign opening ceremonies at Independence, which call for a parade with a score of bands, and also a rally at Kansas City with movie stars and a speech by President Truman.

A Treasury announcement about the change in plans did not refer to the ministerial protest.

"Owing to circumstances beyond his control," the Treasury said in a statement, "the President has asked the four radio networks to use Monday, instead of Sunday, in opening the bond drive."

Some three million volunteer workers are due to participate in the bond drive, which will run from May 16 through June 30, with a goal of $1,040,000,000 in "E" bonds.

A Treasury official said that Sunday night had been selected originally as the "kick off" for the campaign because more people could be reached then.

4 Pyramid Club Indictments Dismissed

Cambridge, Md., April 29 (AP).—Chief Circuit Judge W. Laird Henry, jr., today dismissed indictments against four Delaware residents charged with soliciting members for a Pyramid club.

The judge said he was ruling only on the form of the indictments and not whether pyramid clubs violate the lottery laws.

United Nations Is Termed Incapable of Keeping Peace

The United Nations is no more capable of protecting "international peace and security" than was the League of Nations, George A. Finch, vice president of the American Society of International Law, asserted last night.

Speaking before members of the society during the second of a three-day session, Finch declared that Russia's offer of a nonaggression pact to Norway has "about the same meaning as an invitation from a spider to a fly."

Castigating the framers of the United Nations Charter for failing to define aggression specifically and for accepting the veto principle, the speaker declared them guilty of "a blunder of such magnitude that it has brought the world to the brink of another world war."

Finch pointed to the Rio Pact for hemispheric defense as a forerunner of the proposed North Atlantic Treaty.

Of the latter, he said: . . . 'there is no doubt that it was planned and is intended to be an extension into the North Atlantic area of the principles and purposes of the Rio Pact.

"While the phraseologies of the two pacts in the specification of outlawed acts are not identical, they are sufficiently specific to accomplish the same purpose, that is, of notifying potential aggressors in advance that certain acts will be considered aggression," he pointed out.

Associate Justice Robert H. Jackson of the Supreme Court and James N. Landis, former Harvard Law School dean will address the closing banquet of the society tonight.

Church Council Opposes U. S. Aid to Education

Denver, April 29 (AP).—The American Council of Christian Churches, holding its spring convention here, today announced its opposition to Federal aid to education.

The council said in a resolution it "views with alarm and opposes the entering into the field of education of our National Government through various proposed 'aid to education' bills.

"A free America demands a school system that is free from political control," it added.

To Speak Sunday

Daniel M. Lyons, United States pardon attorney, will speak on "The Use and Effect of Executive Clemency" before the young adult fellowship of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw., at 7 p. m. Sunday.

Rededication Ceremonies Planned for Cathedral

A diocesan-wide service of rededication will be held at 4 p. m. Sunday at the Washington Cathedral, preceding the annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington Monday.

Cathedral and diocesan clergy, lay delegates to the convention from the 90 parishes, and members of the diocesan standing committee and executive council will join in a procession into the Cathedral at 3:50 p. m.

Led by the Cathedral crucifer and flag bearers, the procession will move from the door of Bethlehem Chapel in the crypt through the Cathedral grounds and around to the west front entrance.

Choirs to Join Procession

Choirs from 15 parish churches will join the Cathedral choir and procession as it enters the Cathedral.

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, will preach the sermon and Chancellor G. Bowdoin Craighill, sr., will read the lesson. Heads of diocesan departments will read a special litany.

Following the service members of the clergy and their wives will be entertained at supper by Bishop and Mrs. Dun at their home in the Cathedral close.

The convention will open Monday at 8 a.m. with a service of holy communion for delegates at Christ Church, 620 G st. se. Reports and elections will take place at the morning session.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, will speak at the afternoon meeting at 2:30 p. m.

Speaker at the evening meeting, which begins at 7, will be W. Ted Gannaway, a member of the National Council of the Episcopal Church. He will speak on "Laymen's Work in the Church."

Net of Pepco Up 16.5% in First Quarter

By S. Oliver Goodman

Potomac Electric Power Co. yesterday reported first quarter net income of $1,353,633, a gain of 16.5 per cent over the like 1948 period.

An $88,200 refund of Federal income taxes, applicable to prior years, helped swell this year's net. On the other hand, income for the first 1948 quarter was increased about $288,000 under the modified sliding scale plan of rate regulation, with no similar income item being recorded this year.

Operating revenues for the first period aggregated $9,044,366, a new all-time peak for any three-month period in the company's history and a gain of 15.7 per cent over the same 1948 quarter. Operating costs, including depreciation and taxes, amounted to $7,237,878 for an upturn of 11.8 per cent.

March net income totaled $444,902, a gain of $120,458, or 37 per cent over the same month last year. Operating revenues of $2,571,361 climbed 16 per cent while operating costs of $2,378,934 were up 9.7 per cent.

TRANSIT NET: Despite a dip in March net, Capital Transit Co. yesterday reported a sharp increase in income for the first three months this year. The net figure was $200,383, a gain of $88,251 over the same 1948 quarter. Revenue passengers numbered 78,869,045, about 10 per cent fewer than last year but operating revenues of $7,078,149 were 5.6 per cent higher. March net income was $95,383, against $99,382 last year.

MERGENTHALER: Analysis of Mergenthaler Linotype Co.'s income statement for the six months ended March 31 indicates that operating earnings this year are running at double the previous fiscal year's pace. Excluding the British subsidiary, net for the first six months of this fiscal year was $2,476,000 before Federal taxes. For the entire previous fiscal year net was $2,425,000 before taxes. Current backlog of orders is sufficient to keep the company operating at capacity for the next 18 months, according to Board Chairman William J. Flather, jr., of Washington.

CLEARINGS OFF: Washington bank clearings in April totaled $300,751,165, compared with $322,446,133 in the same 1948 month. For the first four months check turnover aggregated $1,215,702,979, an increase of $33,260,199 over the like period last year.

ODD LOTS: Twenty-three Washington executives have been appointed to standing committee of the United States Savings & Loan League for 1949 . . . Edgar Morris Sales Co. of Washington, electric appliance dealers, is observing its thirtieth anniversary . . . A plan to achieve one unified Midwest stock exchange in place of five or more existing exchanges was offered for members consideration this week . . . A gain in sales but a decline in net profit for 1948 was reported by 14 shoe chain companies . . . North American Co. announced postponement until September 1 of distribution of the common stock of Kansas Power & Light Co.

STORE SALES: Washington department store sales in the week ended April 23 were 25 per cent lower than in the same 1948 week, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reports. For the four weeks ended April 23, the local dollar volume was 8 per cent higher than the like 1948 period. But the four weeks this year included the peak Easter shopping season; last year Easter fell on March 28, three weeks earlier.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Theodore Roosevelt, 3d, grandson of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, is the new Pennsylvania State secretary of commerce . . . Brayton Wilbur, Norman Chandler and Artemus L. Gates were elected directors of Safeway Stores Inc. . . . Manning O'Connor and J. A. Straka, both vice presidents, have been elected directors of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co. . . . John Woodruff has been elevated to sales manager of Colonial Airlines . . . Alfred E. Lyon has been elected board chairman of Philip Morris & Co. and O. Parker McComas president.

SEATS: Fresh evidence of the sad condition of the securities business was seen in a report from the New York Stock Exchange of sale of a membership at $36,009, a drop of $5000 from the previous sale and the lowest seat price paid since 1943. And from the Curb came word of a membership transfer for $9000, lowest since 1944.

EARNINGS: Standard Oil Co. of California reported estimated net income of $37,339 982 or $2.74 a common share for the first quarter, compared with $37,106,904 or $2.85 a share in the same 1948 period. Other earnings statements:

Leo's Ban by Chandler Seen Protective Measure

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

PHILADELPHIA, PA. APRIL 29.—In Carew Tower, Cincinnati, where the sign on the glass door bears the solitary but important-sounding word "Baseball," the file on Leo Durocher is now a bit thicker. Commissioner A. B. Chandler has a new Durocher case to wrestle with.

Pending Chandler's disposal of the matter, he has suspended Durocher indefinitely. That action followed published reports that Leo was in a brawl with a Polo Grounds fan. The suspension could be brief or for a long time. That won't be decided until Chandler receives the full reports.

POVICH

Chandler's ultimate decision will be interesting. The fan says Durocher assaulted him. Durocher says he didn't and anyway the guy was heckling him. If the report shows Durocher did take a swipe at the fellow, it's for Chandler to decide just how much a ballplayer is supposed to take from a fan, and on that point Durocher's chances are not liked.

AGAINST DUROCHER is the fact that he is an old offender in Chandler's book. Chandler ordered him to sit out the whole 1947 season, you remember, "for conduct detrimental to baseball." He was in Chandler's hair before that on charges of keeping improper company. Chandler intimated at the time of handing down his one-year suspension that he had enough on Durocher to unfrock him permanently.

If Durocher does get sat on hard by Chandler this time, the irony will be that he may be getting a bum rap. Durocher was apparently minding his own business until he was provoked. But in baseball, that's a high sin—getting provoked at the customers. Ty Cobb used to tangle with the customers and get away with it, but baseball today is a more genteel game.

At least one development of the newest Durocher case may be significant. Chandler must consider Durocher his personal problem child and himself best able to handle what may come up with Leo. Normally it would appear to be the function of National League President Ford Frick to take action first, but Chandler didn't wait for Frick to act.

IT WAS HERE in Philadelphia that Cobb had his most famous fan trouble, in 1909, shortly after the Athletics moved into Shibe Park. Taunted by spectators in right field, he chased into the seats for one of them, and it was a battle royal until the police moved in. The next day, to forestall a riot, Connie Mack himself escorted Cobb out to his position.

Back in 1932, the Washington Club had its own way of dealing with a troublesome fan in Cleveland who was famed for his vituperation against visiting players. The suspicion was he was in on a season pass from the Cleveland club. He took his station near the Washington bullpen in left field until one day he made the mistake of going out for a beer. Underneath the stands, he was cold-cocked by a Washington relief pitcher who followed him out.

Buck Newsom had fan trouble in Washington a few years back. He was nettled by a loud-voiced customer in the upper boxes behind home plate. "Meet me after the game," challenged Newsom. "Okay," said his heckler. Newsom was ready to keep the date until tipped off after the game that his opponent was to be Heavyweight Natie Brown, who had recently gone 10 rounds with Joe Louis. Newsom found a side-door exit.

PHILADELPHIA HAS had some of the champ hecklers. Some time back a pair of brothers, hucksters by trade, used to team up against the A's for some reason. They sat on opposite sides of the diamond at first and third and had a leather-lunged cross-fire technique.

"Who's a bum?" the brother at first base would yell. "Connie Mack's a bum!" would come from the other side. Mack finally gained their friendship with a couple of season passes.

Up here now they have a character name Pete Adelis, who sees all the games on a pass. He's a convert after being an anti-Athltics heckler. Now he sits upstairs safely above the visiting club's dugout, and lets 'em have it. Mr. Mack gave him to understand that he was not to get personal with the visiting players, but Pete's idea of being impersonal is somewhat strange.

A couple of years ago, Bucky Harris recognized what an earache Adelis could be after hearing him razz the Yankees. Harris played it smart, though. He took the guy to Yankee Stadium as his personal guest and turned him loose on the Cleveland Indians the following week.

Phillies Sell Haas to Giants

Philadelphia, April 29 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies sold Bert Haas to the New York Giants today for a reported $20,000 amid reports that a trade with the Brooklyn Dodgers is being studied.

The 35-year-old Haas, a veteran at first or third base or in the outfield, didn't fit into the Phils' "youth program" and had been used onl in a pinch-hitting role during the early days of the '49 campaign.

Nats Blow Lead in 9th, Present A's 6-5 Victory

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Pa., April 29—The Nats took a one-run lead, no stuff and a lot of nonsense into the ninth inning today and got themselves disgracefully licked by the Athletics, 6 to 5.

Reacting as if giddy at the novelty of holding a one-run lead, the Washington athletes floundered and then flunked out as the A's staged a triumphant two-run inning.

Bebore going into their ninth-inning staggers which included a pair of misplayed bunts, the Nats were making motions toward snatching this first game of their road trip. Eddie Yost tripled home two runs to tie the score in the eighth, and Sam Dente's single moved them in front, 5-4, in the ninth.

And then the Nats proceeded to get off on the left foot. Sid Hudson, who had managed to survive as the starting pitcher to that point, immediately pitched a two-bagger to Eddie Joost that put the tying run on base.

The Fun Starts

Manager Joe Kuhel moved Hudson out and Forrest Thompson in. Valo fouled two attempts to bunt and then singled to center, with Joost cautiously holding up at third. The A's next act was a bunt by Fain, a squeeze. Thompson, with no chance to get Joost at the plate, threw to the plate anyway and everybody was safe.

Now with the score tied, two on and none out, Taft Wright bunted in front of the plate. Catcher Ralph Weigel pounced on the ball and cocked his arm toward third base, only to discover that important bag uncovered by Yost. Again everybody was safe and the bases were full.

Hank Majeski put the Nats out of their embarrassment at that point with a line drive that Clyde Vollmer caught at his shoetops, after which Valo romped happily home from third with the game's biggest run.

Lou Brissie was the winning pitcher. He held the Nats to nine hits while the A's were pummeling Hudson and Thompson for 13. Joost's double to left and Wright's single to right set him up in a 1-0 lead in the first inning, but the Nats wiped that out in the second. Kozar and Weigel doubled to left in succession, and Hudson singled to left to put 'em in front, 2-1.

Out of Hudson in the third, the A's wrested the tying run on singles by Joost and Valo and Wright's long fly, and in the fifth they got another on singles by Valo and former Nat Wright.

It rolled along at 3-2, Athletics, until the seventh when they made it 4-2 on consecutive one-base socks by Valo, Fain and Wright after two were out, and the Nats went into the eighth with only five hits to show against Brissie.

They came up with the two tying runs in that inning, but they couldn't be completely proud of 'em because meanwhile Ed Stewart was picked off first base by Brissie in the midst of the rally.

Dante Is Victim

Dente started it with a single to left and with one out, Stewart walked. Things looked nice for the Nats, until Brissie faked Stewart off first and Dente was out in a rundown at second. Vollmer walked to put the tying run on with two out and Yost got both of 'em home with a splendid triple to the center field corner.

In the ninth, Weigel walked with one out and moved to second on Hudson's out. Dente singled to right to get the Nats a nice one-run lead at that late moment, but it didn't stand up under their self-assault in the A's ninth.

Tomorrow, Paul Calvert will try to win a game for himself and the Nats . . . They haven't scored a run for him in his first two starts . . . He'll face Joe Coleman, the best of the A's pitchers

Bearden Wins Second as Tribe Blasts Hutchinson in 9th, 4-1

Detroit, April 29 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians staged a 3-run uprising in the ninth inning today to beat the Detroit Tigers 4-1 and give lefthander Gene Bearden his second win of the season over the Detroiters.

Bearden, who beat the Tigers 4-3 in a 10-inning game at Cleveland last week, duelled for 8 innings with the Tigers' Freddie Hutchinson before the Indians broke up the 1-1 deadlock.

Mickey Vernon opened the Indians' ninth by singling to right field. He moved to second as Detroit Rightfielder Vic Wertz let the ball get away for an error.

Ken Keltner singled to center, sending Vernon to third. Detroit Rookie Outfielder Johnny Groth got an error when his throw-in was wild, letting Keltner take second. Bob Kennedy was walked purposely loading the bases, with none away.

Hal Peck, pinchhitting for Catcher Jim Hegan, hit a long fly to center and Vernon scored after the catch to make it 2-1.

Bearden clinched his victory by slashing a single to right, scoring Keltner to make it 3-1. Hutchinson was taken out and Marlin Stuart, a young right-hander, came in to pitch for the Tigers.

Raschi Finally Beats Bosox

New York, April 29 (AP).—Vic Raschi yielded only six singles today as he pitched the New York Yankees to a 7-1 triumph over the Boston Red Sox.

The victory was Raschi's first over the Red Sox in his major league career and his third success of the infant season without a setback.

Dom DiMaggio collected half of the Boston blows. He drove home Stan Spence with the lone Red Sox run in the seventh inning.

Jack Kramer, who beat the Yanks five times without incurring a defeat last year, started for the Red Sox and worked the first six innings, allowing three hits and four runs. The start was Keamer's first of the season. The handsome righthander has been bothered with a hitch in his right shoulder.

A boot by Shortstop Vern Stephens helped the Yanks to score three runs in the second. The Yanks completed their scoring in the eighth at the expense of Denny Galehouse, scoring three times.

Johnson Schools Hold Second Session for 3000 Kids Today

More fun and lessons are in store for the 3000 youngsters of the Walter Johnson Memorial Baseball School as the second sessions begin this morning at 10 o'clock.

The class locations are the same—22 District of Columbia Recreation Department playgrounds.

With their Nat instructors on a two-week road trip, the pupils will get expert information on how to play from the area's top former professional, college and sandlot players.

At Takoma, for example, will be Bill Herbert, former right-handed pitcher for the New York Giants.

And at Langley will be Johnny Harvill, who last season retired from the Boston Red Sox farm system. Johnny was a battery mate for Sammy Webb, Giants' pitcher, when both were playing at McKinley Tech High School.

Registration at last week's opening classes exceeded expectations, but youngsters of all ages are still eligible to sign up. A member of the Nats appeared at each class last week, and will offer further instructions at the fourth and final sessions May 14. The third session is slated for May 7.

Diplomas are being prepared for those pupils who attend most of the classes. In addition, every pupil is being assigned to a Johnson League team, and a schedule is being drawn up for games through the summer. The championship games will be played in Griffith Stadium.

Durocher Will Answer Accusation on Tuesday

Durocher Names Frisch His Acting Manager

Boston, April 29 (AP).—Calmly and affably, Leo Durocher today took the latest suspension in his stormy baseball career. Calmly and affably, as a result of which he has named the veteran Frankie Frisch as acting manager of the New York Giants.

"I have heard nothing official from Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler or his office," Durocher said when he arrived here from New York today.

"I learned about it only when a Providence Journal-Bulletin reporter boarded our train in that city and showed me an Associated Press story about my indefinite suspension. The news was a stunning surprise."

When the train reached Boston, Durocher and traveling secretary, Eddie Brannick, secreted themselves in their compartment as the rest of the Giants' party dropped off at the Back Bay Station and headed for their nearby hotel.

"Eddie and I left the train at the South Station and rushed to a phone to contact Horace Stoneham, the Giants' president," Durocher explained. "I had to get my instructions from him before making any decision."

"Mr. Stoneham informed me that he had official notification of my suspension from the commissioner's office and advised me to fly back to New York tonight," Leo continued. "He also gave me permission to name a temporary manager."

Before delegating the Giants' managerial reins to the veteran Frisch, Durocher held a 20-minute press conference.

"Please don't ask me anything about yesterday's happenings in the Polo Grounds," he pleaded at the outset. "It's such a ridiculous situation.

Durocher, who has been suffering from a cold for the past 10 days, appeared much more concerned about that minor ailment than he did about the latest Chandler edict against him. He also appeared confident that his version of the Boysen episode, with which many of his players agree, will weigh heavily in his favor

"From now on, Mr. Stoneham does all the talking," Durocher said as his conference adjourned.

Two N. Y. Officials Demand 'Lip's' Permanent Suspension

By Rud Rennie

New York, April 29 (NYHT.).—Leo Durocher, manager of the New York Giants baseball club, was suspended indefinitely today by order of Albert B. Chandler, baseball commissioner, as a result of an accusation made by Fred Boysen, a Brooklyn baseball fan, that Durocher had assaulted him after Thursday's game in the Polo Grounds between the Giants and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Chandler ordered Durocher to appear in the commissioner's office in Cincinnati for a hearing next Tuesday.

The opinion of the Giants' players apropos this order is that Chandler took this swift action to protect Durocher from possible harm at the hands of indignant fans and to prevent possible disturbances in the ball park.

This attitude on the part of the players gives a sensible twist to an otherwise hasty pronouncement by the commissioner which created the impression that he was condemning Durocher before any authoritive charge had been made against him.

As the day passed, the "deplorable incident" which caused Nation-wide interest lost much of its violence.

Boysen Advised to "Make Up"

Boysen, a 22-year-old former serviceman of Puerto Rican extraction who lives in Brooklyn, was discharged today from Sydenham Hospital where he was taken after the alleged beating by Durocher on the playing field after the game. Physicians who examined Boysen said there was a bruise on his side but no evidence of internal injuries.

Morris Golding, an unemployed textile broker, who accompanied Boysen to the hospital in a taxicab after the alleged assault, said tonight on the telephone that he had just left Boysen and that he had a bruise on his side but no internal injuries.

"I wish I hadn't been there," he said. "I should have minded my own business; but I thought the guy needed medical attention. Now if he takes my advice, he'll kiss and make up. Boysen's a fan like me, and he's a pretty good razzer, if you know what I mean. But as a fan he shouldn't want that Durocher should be banned from baseball, and if he takes my advice he'll forget the whole thing."

Several persons, not necessarily friendly toward Durocher, telephoned National League headquarters in the interests of justice to say that Durocher had not attacked Boysen.

Two Officials Assail Leo . . . . .

Boysen's story was that he had run onto the field to try to shake hands with Jackie Robinson, the Brooklyn second baseman, and that Durocher had come upon him from behind and had struck him on the neck, knocking him down, and had then kicked him.

This story reported in the newspapers and on the radio, stirred Nation-wide interest. Countless

Fan Calls Boysen's Remarks 'Indecent', Denies Leo Hit Him

New York, April 29 (NYHT). Julius November, a New York attorney, who said he was sitting in Section 16, Seat 11, directly behind Fred Boysen at yesterday's Brooklyn-New York game at the Polo Grounds, today gave his version of the altercation.

"This belligerent customer," said November, "was loud and insulting. He made insulting remarks about Durocher and about his wife. He exceeded the bounds of decency. I wondered why he was not ejected from the park.

"After the game, this man jumped over the railing onto the playing field and ran after Durocher. As he approached, he raised one hand over Durocher's head, maybe to grab his cap, maybe for some other reason. Durocher turned and pushed him and went on his way. He positively did not strike him or kick him," November declared.

RUD RENNIE.

Writers Don't See Eye to Eye On Incident

RUSS HODGES, who broadcast Washington Redskin football games before Harry Wismer took over, was on top of Leo Durocher's brief tussle with a Brooklyn fan at the Polo Grounds Thursday.

Hodges, now doing the New York Giants baseball games, was still on the air when he noticed what looked like the makings of a fight out near second base immediately after the game.

He told his audience to hold on, there might be a scrap. Then he dismissed it with a note about cooler heads having intervened.

SITTING HERE in Washington reading many versions of the incident by various writers, you are struck with the conflict in their reports.

Some of them insist that Durocher did not hit the Brooklyn fan, Fred Boysen. The New York press will rally to Leo's support, they say.

The opposite view is taken by another writer who says: "That the incident was provoked there could be no doubt. And that Durocher, who has the lowest boiling point of any man in baseball, was upset by heckling, was apparent to every fan in the park."

Yet it is admitted that "the alleged attack took place so quickly that not a single writer in the large press box at the Polo Grounds was aware of it."

There he has a point; a regretable point. If any one writer had seen the tussle so that he could sit down and write, "I saw the whole thing and this positively is what happened," the affair would be a lot easier to clear up.

Phillies Beat Dodgers, 5-2

Brooklyn, April 29 (AP).—Southpaw Ken Heintzelman of the last-place Philadelphia Phillies couldn't stop Roy Campanella, but he held the rest of the Brooklyn Dodgers at bay to hurl the Phillies to a 5-2 victory today.

Campanella slugged the offerings of Heintzelman for two home runs, one in the fourth and the other in the ninth while the Phils hurler was coasting along on a four-run margin.

Faultless And Pilaster Co-Favorites

Havre de Grace, April 29.—With Calumet's Coaltown operating in New York, stake performers here will come out from hiding tomorrow for the $15,000 added Havre de Grace Handicap. The Calumet barn, however, will have strong representation in Faultless, who will vie for favoritism with Harry L. Straus' Pilaster.

Pilaster is top weighted in the mile and an eighth test under 124 pounds, while Faultless has been assigned 122 pounds by Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan.

In addition to this pair, the field boasts C. C. Tanner's Nearway, 118; Gustave Ring's Lord Grillo, 118; Christiana Stables' Service Pilot, 116; Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Seven League, 113; G. R. Watkin's Cat Bridge, 112, and Brookmeade Stable's Chains, 107.

Pilaster and Faultless will present the fans a difficult problem in their efforts to establish a favorite, since both of them boast superior form and both appear ready for a top effort.

In two starts this year against allowance company, Pilaster has twice finished second, but, in both cases, the distance was admittedly too short. Today, Pilaster will have a route more to his liking and he's certain to be closing with a rush through the stretch.

Stout Brings Victor Home At $22.60

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Havre de Grace, Md., April 29.—Laran, a 5-year ol owned by E. A. Nicodemus a Pennsylvania ice cream manufacturer, put the favorite players in the deep freeze here today.

Last Saturday Laran slopped to victory through the mud at 18-1 on his first outing of the year. Today he found the track fast and apparently enjoyed it for he drove home three parts of a length in front of his closest rival in a field of 10.

Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Big Story was second, a half length in advance of E. B. Townsend's Harold Harter. Thus longshots filled out the payoff positions with Mrs. J. V. Stewart's Dr. Almac and others who drew the heavy play up the race track.

It was to the tune of a $22.60 mutuel that Laran turned in his smashing victory under good handling by Jockey Jimmy Stout. The winner was clocked in 1:11 1/5, a second over the track record held by Calumet's Pep Well.

Laran looked like anything but a winner in the early stages of the 6-furlong test, breaking next to last. Slammering, Dr. Almac and Little Harp vied for the early lead with Isa close up. The last named went to the outside fence at the far turn while Dr. Almac took over the lead.

Stout weaved his mount between horses and Laran came on with a strong move to get in front in the stretch. In the final drive the son of Hairan held Big Story safe. Harold Harter, the slowest beginning in the race, closed willingly to be a close up third.

Jockey Benny Civitello, in action for the first time this week, rode his nineteenth winner of the meeting in the seventh race aboard J. J. Hogan's Comely Babe, a $5.60 favorite. He brought the mare from far back to win going away from Mrs. Mary Wood's Mattie Girl with B. F. Christmas' Black Object third.

The victory allowed Civitello to finish the day one winner ahead of Steve Brooks who had tied him by riding two winners on the card. The Calumet contract boy piloted King Ranch's Tampero, the $3.60 winner of the second, and High Ground Stable's Rancor, at $7, in the third.

Cubs Beat Cards, 5-4

Chicago, April 29 (AP).—Forrest Burgess, rookie catcher, singled with the bases loaded in the twelfth inning to give the Chicago Cubs a 5-4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals here today before 13,363. Bob Chipman, relieving Johnny Schmitz in the tenth, was the winner.

Pope Stops Western, 8-0, With 3-Hitter

McKinley Tech backed up Pitcher Jack Pope with 10 hits to defeat Western, 8-0, yesterday at Western and to remain in a tie for the interhigh league lead with Wilson.

Pope held the Western nine to two hits while his mates were running over three Western hurlers. The Raiders' starting pitcher, Pete Cerrick, received a broken nose in the second inning after being struck by a ground ball off the bat of Tech's John Passas.

'Lip' Again Puts Chandler on Spot

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, April 29 (NYHT).—When the story broke, John Lardner, the essayist, said: "Did you see the game? He'll be acquitted." In one inning the Dodgers had scored eight runs before the Giants got anybody out. There are times when the manager of a baseball team is not only justified in using his knuckles for the purpose heaven intended but is morally and ethically bound to belt somebody. Preferably a couple of his pitchers but if such are not available, then the first chin offered.

Red Smith

The Dodgers had beaten the Giants 15 to 2 and soon afterward a noisy Brooklyn fan named Fred Boysen was in a hospital, bearing a lawyer but no marks that the doctors or X-ray camera could discover.

Out of the confusion that ensued two points emerged clearly:

(a) If Leo Durocher, the practically peerless leader of the Giants, slugged and kicked a customer without sufficient provocation, he deserves to get the book which Happy Chandler has had prepared, these last several years, to chuck at him.

(b) Of all the men in baseball, Durocher is the most vulnerable, the most likely prospect for a trumped-up charge.

This is Happy Chandler's chance to make the major leagues. He can prove himself as a commissioner if he moves swiftly but with caution, gets his facts straight and then acts with firm justice. And does it all in the open.

This will be easier than it sounds, for in this case the true facts will be made clear. Whatever happened, it took place in the open, in center field in the Polo Grounds with scores of witnesses present. Although the accounts of witnesses are confused and conflicting at present, as they always are immediately after an event, it will not be long before the truth is clearly established.

THUS FAR CHANDLER has done all right. His first statement on the case was one which the world has waited for four years to hear from his lips. He said: "I'll say nothing now." When, subsequently, he suspended Durocher pending investigation, he was not beating the gun or prejudging the case. That is proper routine as in the case, say, of a policeman who is relieved from duty until charges against him are heard.

Physicians could find no evidence that Boysen had been hit, kicked or punished in any way.

As a general business policy, it is unwise to punch customers but it is a mistake to believe that nobody should ever be punched. Examples of candidates eligible for a slugging are sportsmen who believe the price of a grandstand seat entitles them to shout scurrilous comments about another man's wife, and politicians who run into print before the facts have been established—with charges of "outrageous conduct," "downright intolerance," and "vengeful" acts, along with demands for expulsion of the manager and a racial boycott of the ball club.

THERE IS NOTHING intrinsically wrong with whacking people, provided there is proper discrimination shown in the selection of the puncher and the punchee. Spectators at ball games have been belted in the past, with varying consquences.

Leo Durocher, however, is not eligible to slug people because he is not a priestly character. There is a popular tendency to say "even if he didn't do it, the bum ought to be thrown out because he is bad for baseball." This sort of reasoning was officially applied against him in 1947. It falls short of perfect justice, for although a man might be banished because of his skill at gin rummy, at pool, or because of a movie actor's amazing luck in rolling eights the hard way in some man's apartment, it is a disgraceful thing to convict him on a phony charge.

When punching needs to be done, it is especially unwise to elect Leo, because he hits too hard. A few years ago, a man named John Christian got a broken jaw, a black eye and head bruises out of not being punched by Durocher.

In Penn Relays

Hoya Beats Brother But Finishes 3d

Post Reporter

Philadelphia, April 29.—Georgetown's Billy Mitchell won a private 120-yard high hurdle duel, but had to be content with third place in the fifty-fifth annual Penn Relays opening program at Franklin Field today.

Billy finished in front of his brother—Indiana's Tom Mitchell, defending champion in the event, who was fifth. But Penn State's Jim Gehrdes won by a yard over Dick Maxwell, Ohio State, in 14.4, only a tenth of a second off the meet record.

The, Hoyas' Mitchell won his heat in 14.5 over Cornell's John Laibe and Virginia's Bill Mohler before he disappointed in the final. Maryland's Karl Rubach, clocked in 15.2, just failed to qualify.

At that, Mitchell's performance was about the best registered by the large contingent of college and high school trackmen representing Washington. If the boys are to win any championships, they'll have to take them in tomorrow's finale.

Maryland's speedy quarter-mile relay had some tough luck. The quartet composed of Charlie Wilson, Paul Ostrye, George McGowan and Bill Alexion wasn't extended in winning its heat by more than 10 yards over Pitt, North Carolina A. & T., and Cornell.

The Terps' time of 42.4 was the fifth best clocking but missed qualifying for the final by a tenth of a second.

Cardozo Fourth of 72

A Howard foursome—Harry Johnson, Booker Anderson, Pete Zabriskie and Capt. Joe Payne—was third to Wayne, eventual winner, and Seton Hall in its heat.

Another Howard team was seventh in the spring medley. The Bisons used Lou Russell and Jim Bruce with Payne and Anderson in this event.

Cardozo failed to win its heat but qualified for the final on the basis of its time and finished fourth out of an original field of 72 in the United States quarter-mile high schol championship relay.

Cardozo's squad of Henry Johnson, George Carter, Earl Storm and Joe Walker was timed in 44.7. Dunbar, represented by Ray Waters, Allen Williams, Lem Harrison and Lou Mathis, was third in 45.1 and just missed qualifying.

Armstrong won its heat in 46 flat but was crowded out of the finals. The Tech men were Ed Carson, Burton Bellfield, Maurice Beveney and Avon Harding.

Don Govan, John Shannon, Bob Rodgers and Frank McNally fell way behind for St. John's in the quarter-mile event. And neither Cardozo nor Dunbar could threaten in the U. S. medley relay event.

Two Records Smashed

In the main college events, Reggie Pearman, NYU, beat off the challenge of Ohio State's Mal Whitfield, Olympic 800-meter champ, to win the sprint medley title for the Violet in 3:24.9, only six tenths of a second off the meet record that has stood since 1938.

Two meet records were shattered in the five individual events. Yale's Olympians, Vic Frank and Jim Fuchs, took the discus and shot put, respectively.

Frank heaved the discus 170 feet, 7¾ inches to shatter by nearly 3 feet the mark established by Indiana's Archie Harris in 1941.

Fuchs, fourth in the discus, won the shot put with a toss of 55 feet, 10⅝ inches—just an inch and three-eighths away from the record made last year by Michigan's Charley Fonvile. Frank was third with the shot.

Cornell's Charles Moore, whose father twice won hurdles titles here on Franklin Field, chopped a full second off the carnival record with a 52.1 effort in the 400-meter hurdles.

Horace Ashenfelter, Penn State, won the two-mile run in 9:21.5 over North Carolina's Sam Magill, who trailed by 30 yards. Maryland's Tyson Creamer finished far back.

Durocher Banned Indefinitely, Chandler Calls Him on Carpet

persons were ready to believe that Durocher, because of his spotted reputation, had committed another act of questionable virtue.

State Assemblyman Elijah L. Crump sent telegrams to Chandler, to Ford C. Frick, president of the National League, and to Horace Stoneham, president of the Giants, saying: "Leo Durocher's outrageous and unsportsmanlike conduct justifies his expulsion from organized baseball."

Charles Goldstein, one-time city magistrate, said he would go to Cincinnati Monday with a committee of 25 persons to ask Chandler that Durocher's indefinite suspension be made for life.

Goldstein, now president of the Voluntary Public Defender Committee of Kings County, Inc., said the committee felt that Durocher's return to the sport would "impair its dignity and damage its reputation."

Samuel S. Reinish, an attorney, was brought into the case by a telephone call. After listening to Boysen, Reinish said he would press charges against Durocher and on Monday would seek a summons for his appearance in court.

Late this afternoon, Reinish withdrew from the case. A spokesman in his office at 18 East Forty-first st., explained that Mr. Reinish was a tax expert. "He went into the case," said the spokesman, "because the young man needed advice and he thought he might be helpful. But this is not in his line, so he withdrew."

Durocher said he was aware of some one yelling insults at him, but that he went about his business and was on his way off the field when someone tried to grab his cap. "I did not know who it was," he is quoted as saying, "and I did not care. I pushed the man away and continued to the clubhouse."

The next 24 hours were hard on the Giants' manager. He had no sleep Thursday night because the telephone rang all night long. He went to Grand Central Station yesterday morning to accompany the Giants to Boston.

His name was on the front pages of newspapers linked with another disreputable incident. In 1945 when he was manager of the Dodgers, he was charged with assault by another fan, John Christian, and was acquitted. In 1947 he was suspended for the entire season by Chandler for conduct detrimental to baseball. Ever since his reinstatement, Durocher has had to watch his step.

Photographers pursued the Giants' manager and drove him into hiding in the washroom of the train. At Providence, local reporters brought the news of his indefinite suspension by Chandler. Durocher shrugged and had nothing to say.

Perjury Trials Ordered for 2 Steel Officials

Two steel company executives were ordered yesterday to stand trial on a charge of giving perjurious testimony concerning "bonus payments" during an investigation by Congress of the "gray market" in steel.

They are William W. Voisine, owner of the Wayne Sheet Steel Co., and mayor of Ecorse, Mich., and Edward C. Sauve of Detroit.

The defendants appeared in District Court yesterday for a scheduled sentencing for perjury. They had pleaded no contest earlier.

Judge James W. Morris set aside the plea after observing that statements given to the probation officer by the defendants indicated they had not committed perjury. The judge sent the case back for reassignment after substituting a plea of innocent.

Hit-Run Crash Kills Driver

terday after an automobile accident in which his buddy was killed and a Washington man was injured slightly.

The Army dispatched a brain surgeon from Walter Reed Hospital to Annapolis to work over 19-year-old Corpl. Earl H. Cunningham, member of the Third Cavalry at nearby Fort Meade.

Corpl. James Franklin Wollard, 22, of Hagerstown, Md., was killed in the crash earlier at the intersection of United States Highways 301 and 50, about 13 miles from Washington.

Their car crashed head-on with another driven by James Grego, whose address was given as 1306 Euclid st. nw., Washington. Grego was only slightly injured. State police reported both cars demolished.

Wollard and Cunningham were driving north, headed for Fort Meade.

2 Safe Gangs Broken Up, Police Say

The activities of two "amateur" safe gangs have been ended, police claimed yesterday, with the arrest of eight persons in recent days.

Two of those arrested were youths captured Thursday night after an attempt had been made to break into the High's ice cream store at 1016 N. Capitol st.

They are John Groomes, jr., 19, of 1433 G st. ne, and Albert Williams, jr., 19, of 231 K st. ne. Detective Sergt. Benjamin Clark and Detective Norman Gray of the general assignment squad captured them near the store after a neighbor heard noise and called police.

Groomes and Williams were charged with attempted housebreaking. Two others named by Williams were arrested and are being questioned.

Police believe the four are responsible for at least eight other safe jobs.

Because of this, United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence set bond of $5000 each for Grpomes and Williams at their arraignment yesterday.

Police said they have rounded up four members of a second safe gang. After the Economy Market, 2153 Pennsylvania ave. nw., was robbed of its safe containing $1400 on Monday night, Stephen Buckner, 24, of 804 N. Capitol st., and Matthew J. Woodward, 25, of 432 Ridge st. nw., were arrested Tuesday and charged with the robbery.

Thursday, police picked up Alonzo A. Crowder, 24, and Henry C. Crump, 23, both of 730 6th st. nw., and charged them with participating in the same safe robbery. The four are held in $300 bond each.

Builders Offer Slums 'Cure' film story to Senators Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) and Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) in the former's office.

Senator Ferguson, who has been studying District enforcement practices in blighted areas here, commented that "sustained interest is the secret to the problem, and I am trying my best to get to the bottom of it."

Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.), a Banking Committee member who also saw the Baltimore Plan sound film, joined Sparkman in saying the program is "fine as far as it goes, but not the complete answer."

Robert Bready, president of the Maryland Home Builders Association, told reporters that a similar plan in Washington would be "taking a big step toward wiping out some of the city's worst slums. We realize, however, that it is not a cure-all, but we are unalterably opposed to communities securing Federal funds to do a job that can be done locally," he said.

District officials have insisted that the Baltimore Plan would not help in the city's "rock bottom" slum dwellings because 60 per cent of them are beyond repair.

A mass razing operation, therefore, would result in making about 5000 people homeless unless more replacement housing than now exists is provided, Assistant Engineer Commissioner Carlin Whitesell told the Senate District Committee Wednesday.

Senate Committee Votes 15,000 Added Jobs for Treasury and Postoffice

A bill that would allow the Treasury and Postoffice Departments to have about 15,000 additional jobs over the number previously allowed by the House was sent to the Senate yesterday by its Appropriations Committee.

The big increases voted by the Senate committee were: 5543 new jobs in the enforcement division of the Internal Revenue Bureau and about 10,000 jobs in the Postoffice, mainly clerks and carriers.

The House allowed Revenue funds to hire 1476 additional enforcement employes. The Senate committee recommended funds for 7019, or the full number requested by the tax collection agency.

In announcing approval of the bill, Chairman Maybank revealed there had been no discussion of a flat cross-the-board cut for the departments. The Senate Thursday sent the Labor-Federal Security money bill back to committee with instructions to cut it 5 per cent.

Other Treasury increases over the House voted by the committee: Secretary's office, $100,000; Customs Bureau, $300,000; Office of Administrative Services, $100,000; Narcotics Bureau, $50,000; Bureau of Engraving and Printing, $1,000,000; Secret Service, $50,000, and Coast Guard, $2,945,000 for pay and allowances, and $763,000 for general expenses.

Increases voted the Post Office Department over the House are as follows: salaries in the department here, $124,600; chief inspector, $76,000; office of the first assistant to pay the salaries of clerks and carriers, $11,851,000; office of the second assistant to pay the salaries of rural carriers and railway mail clerks, $4,762,000, and office of the fourth assistant to pay custodial employes and to buy additional equipment, $5,696,000.

Under the House bill a substantial reduction of postal employes would have had to be made. The Senate bill if enacted into law, would keep the postal service at approximately its present employment level, perhaps even with a small staff increase.

The committee put a rider on the bill to require the Post Office Department to make quarterly reports on overtime worked by its employes.

RFC: The committee also recommended that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation be given $750,000 more than was allowed by the House. RFC is still reducing its staff and another 300 employes would have had to be fired if its House-approved budget had been enacted into law.

OHE: The needy employes of the Office of the Housing Expediter here were "paid" yesterday—but they had to borrow the money to pay themselves. This is the story:

OHE employes hadn't been paid for nearly a month because of the Senate-House tie-up on the first deficiency bill. Yesterday was to have been the second payless payday—but The American Security & Trust Co. came to the rescue.

Bank officials arranged for employes to sign a joint note for their salaries, and also another document that permits OHE officials to turn over their checks to the bank when Congress finally acts. The bank is charging 4 per cent interest to the employes for bailing out Uncle Sam.

Before the bank came to their rescue, hard-pressed OHE employes had cashed war bonds; borrowed on insurance, and several had taken annual leave to work at temporary "cash" jobs.

Meantime, it was reported that conferees on the deadlocked deficiency bill would meet again Monday and some people were optimistic for a settlement at that time. In fact, one key conferee said he believed a basis for compromise had been agreed to tentatively.

Edmund O. Carl, president and general manager Call Carl, Inc.

Hear Emil Schram

The general membership meeting at the Mayflower Hotel last night heard Emil Schram, New York Stock Exchange president, declare substantial reductions in Federal taxes are not currently feasible.

"Our heavy national debt, the continuing drain of pensions and other payments resulting from the recent wars," he said, "and our responsibilities in the world today make large tax cuts impossible at present."

Schram, former Reconstruction Finance Corporation chairman, added: "That is not to say we cannot correct certain features of our tax system that bear most heavily on equity financing . . . to avoid economic stagnation."

He said "double taxation of distributed corporate earnings and the treatment of capital gains and losses are . . . the two features of the present tax structure that do most to discourage venture capital."

Warns of Damaging Trends

Schram warned there are "damaging trends" which must be bucked today. In addition to punitive rates of taxes," he said these trends include "too much debt, both corporate and individual;" centralization of authority in the Federal Government, and concentrated financial power of our life insurance industry."

Federal regulation of insurance companies he branded as "abhorhent," but he called for "a most searching analysis of every phase of the functions and operations of insurance companies."

"The next revenue act," Schram said," must revitalize venture capital for the job that is ahead, both at home and abroad."

Board of Trade members also heard the annual reports of outgoing president Leon Chatelain, jr., and committee chairman.

Sees Sales Tax Here

Chatelain stated "it now appears that we may be successful in obtaining a new revenue bill for the District including a 2 per cent sales tax."

He predicted Congress will not enact any of the "so-called home rule" bills introduced this session. Proposals to date have been "found wanting" by the Board of Trade, he said.

Chatelain pointed out that 1673 applicants the past year have swelled trade board membership to more than 8000, the largest in history.

Joseph C. McGarraghy led members in a rising vote of thanks to Chatelain for a "magnificent administration." McGarraghy, as chairman, reported the Greater National Capital Committee has set $120,000—$35,000 more than last year—as its campaign fund goal.

He said the fund will be used "to bring to Washington the business that we need and to do as businessmen what we can for Washington."

Makes Safety Appeal

Miss Anita Blair, blind girl from El Paso, Tex., accompanied by her guide dog Fawn, made a traffic safety appeal in connection with the report of traffic committee chairman Col. Alvin B. Barber.

She observed that somewhere on the nation's roads, two jaywalkers were probably killed during her address.

Other committee reports were made by chairman Kirk Miller, of the Clean-Up campaign which starts today; Thomas J. Groom, savings bond program; W. Russell Lamar, Ottawa trip preparations; Harrison Somerville, membership committee awards, and Andrew L. Devlin, annual Spring outing plans, and treasurer Robert V. Fleming.

Arlington Tax Hiked 20 Cents

$8,462,915 Budget Adopted by Board; School, General Fund Requests Trimmed

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

An $8,462,915 Arlington budget calling for a 20-cent increase in the tax rate to $3.45 was adopted last night by the Arlington County Board.

The budget, for 1949-50, cuts $379,206 from the amount asked by the Arlington school board and $273,336 from the amount requested for general county purposes.

The new budget is based on an expectation of collecting 95 per cent of available revenue. It goes into effect July 1.

The school budget last year was set up on a lump sum basis, while this year it was related on a percentage basis to tax collections. This brought it in line with other country budget designations which were already on a percentage basis.

Ten cents of the 20-cent increase will be applied to school purposes and the remaining 10 cents for the county general fund.

Schools in the 1948-49 budget received a $1.55 slice of the $3.25 assessment per $100 valuation, the county got $1.70.

Vote Is Four to One

Last night's board vote on the county tax increase was 4 to 1 with member, Mrs. Florence Cannon, voting against the proposal. Member Daniel A. Dugan, who agreed with Mrs. Cannon that the increase was not large enough, nevertheless voted with the majority.

Earlier, Dugan's proposal for a 45-cent increase—20 cents for the county, 25 cents for schools—was turned down by a 3-to-2 vote.

The 20-cent increase adopted was moved by member F. Freeland Chew who said he also spoke for Chairman Basil M. DeLashmutt and member Alfred E. Frisbie.

Chew said that if the board had increased the tax rate by 89 cents, as proposed in the original budget estimate "taxes would have almost doubled in five years."

Increase of $447,950

DeLashmutt said the schools next year will get on estimated $2,197,950 from county sources alone, an increase of $447,950 over this year.

The county budget will receive $774,667 more in 1949-50 than it did during the present fiscal year.

In paring $273,336 from the county's portion of the budget the board eliminated, among other things, a $25,000 drill tower for the Arlington County Fire Department, $80,000 which would have provided a 5 per cent pay increase for county employes, and $62,500 from the county's share of the George Washington Memorial Parkway Extension.

At the same time, the board added $12,500 to the budget for Arlington County Hospital to compensate for losses on indigent patients.

How the $379,206 school reduction will be budgeted is to be decided by the Arlington School Board in a conference this weekend, School Board Chairman Barnard Joy said last night.

Tax Boost for Schools Rejected in Fairfax

The Fairfax County Supervisors last night defeated a proposed 10-cent tax rate increase for school construction next year by a 4-to-2 vote.

Voting for the increase, which would have been used to help build seven four-room primary grade schools, were Arthur I. Shaffer and C. B. Runyon. Voting against were G. Wallace Carper, Maurice W. Fox, E. C. Sheads and Robert R. Dye.

The board approved the present raise of $3.19 per $100 valuation for the fiscal year starting July 1.

Superintendent of Schools W. T. Woodson appeared at the special supervisors meeting to make a special plea for the increased rate which would have meant about $50,000 extra for schools.

Woodson said the schools are desperately needed now and he estimated enrollment would increase 2000 in the next year.

Bar Is Sought To 1st-Grade School Entry In February

Board to Consider Plan to Eliminate Mid-Year Start in Kindergarten Also

Kindergarten and first-grade pupils no longer will enter school in February if the Board of Education adopts a proposal to be presented by School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning next week.

The school head also said yesterday he will ask the board to consider the elimination of mid-year promotions.

Under the proopsal, all 5 and 6-year-olds entering school for the first time will start in September.

Such a move, Dr. Corning said, would place the city in line with most other school systems throughout the country.

The school superintendent indicated he favored such a plan although at present he is not making a recommendation to the board.

The mid-year group now complicates school organization, making it necessary for teachers to try to instruct in the same classrooms students on various levels, Dr. Corning said. He also declared that the present system is costly and overcrowds buildings by requiring that separate kindergarten and first-grade classes be set up in February.

If the change is approved, some adjustment will be made in present regulations requiring that stulents who enter kindergarten in September be 5 years old before November of the same year, Dr. Corning said.

The school board when it meets Wednesday also will consider legislation prepared by Dr. Corning that will give the board control over a centralized cafeteria program.

Another matter to come before the board is a rule that would define rights of teachers to hold other jobs outside school hours.

Firing Is Urged For Policeman In Gun Waving

A Police trial board yesterday recommended dismissal from the force of a police private who was accused of waving his gun under a lieutenant's nose and saying, "Here, take a smell of this."

"I was irrational, probably from some medicine I took for an abscessed tooth," Pvt. David G. White of the Twelfth Precinct explained to the board in his defense.

White, who joined the force in 1942, pleaded guilty to charges of failing to report on time for duty, being absent from duty without leave, conduct unbecoming an officer and disobedience of orders.

He was suspended from the force after he reported three hours late for duty April 19, refused to explain adequately why he was late and flourished his service revolver under the nose of Lieut. Clarence A. Musselman.

Inspector Lloyd Kelley, who questioned White shortly after the incident, testified yesterday that White stated he was unavoidably detained by an attempt to bribe him in Maryland, that he fired his gun twice into a car in self-defense, and that if he said more, his family might be jeopardized.

White said yesterday, however, that he did not remember any of the conversation with Kelley. He said what actually happened was that he was not due to report to work until midnight, so he went down to an uncle's cottage in Annapolis in the afternoon.

His abscessed tooth was paining him so much that he took several doses of the medicine given him by the dentist, he said. Then he fell asleep and didn't wake up until 10 o'clock that night, he added.

The decision of the board members, Inspector George Wallrodt and Capts. Basil McAllister and Irvin Umbaugh, was unanimous.

On Negro 'Screen'

Offer to Face Critics Made By Ruhland

Health Officer George C. Ruhland, under fire from several District groups for his proposal to screen Negroes coming here from the South, offered last night to meet with his critics "so I can speak for myself."

Dr. Ruhland said his proposal was made in the interest not only of those coming here who will enter slums, but mainly for the health protection of the remainder of the population.

The health official said he intended his proposal to include both Negroes and whites who might be planning to "move into a city already known for its inadequate housing."

Yesterday the civic committee of the Baptist Ministers' Conference of Washington declared that "if Dr. Ruhland has been correctly quoted, he has certainly disqualified himself as a public official in the District of Columbia."

The group said, "It would appear that Dr. Ruhland has set himself up as the head of some Nazi Gestapo. Upon what authority has he assumed the right to determine what section of the country an American shall live in? The Negro has as much right to live in the District of Columbia as Dr. Ruhland."

It suggested qualified Negro health officials be appointed here "who would have a far greater knowledge of improving the health conditions than he has shown."

The District unit of the Progressive Party called on President Truman to remove Dr. Ruhland as a "reckless official." The group scored Dr. Ruhland's proposal as an "arrogant, patronizing and detestable statement."

2 Given Terms In Crap Game Gunplay Here

Two gunpacking Baltimoreans received prison sentences yesterday in District Court as the result of a 9th st. shooting affray over winnings in a roving crap game here.

They are John Joseph Bruno, 38, and James T. (Skinner) Skeens, 28.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut imposed sentence after observing: "There is no leniency in my heart for these men."

Skeens received 18 months to four years in prison for deadly assault. Bruno received a year for assault and an additional six months for carrying a deadly weapon.

When Judge Schweinhaut imposed sentence, two women identified as wives of the defendants began sobbing aloud.

A redhaired woman, said to be Skeen's wife, collapsed and was revived by a matron. Her infant child also was crying. The other woman, tall, blond and identified as Bruno's spouse, also wept.

According to court statements, Skeens and Bruno on February 15 were players in a dice game held at the Mayflower and Ambassador Hotels.

After the game, it was said, the two Baltimoreans drove over and parked in the 900 block of 9th st. nw., outside a poolroom. There they met Lonnie Polson, 34, of Cheverly, Md. According to Skeen's statements to police, Polson refused to split winnings of the game.

Bruno was accused of "pistol whipping" or beating up Polson with his weapon. Skeens was convicted of shooting Edward S. Ryan, jr., 24, 1013 8th st. nw., who said he was a passerby, in the leg.

In other District Court sentences, Major Bandy, 37, and Blanche T. McCormick, 49, were fined $200 each and placed on two years' probation for collecting bets in a numbers lottery business here.

Sinclair Lucas, 40, of 70 Q st. nw., received three years' probation for promoting a lottery. Martha Clanton, 25, 2908 Georgia ave. nw., received two years' probation for lottery operation.

Fay Says 'Lost' Prisoner Not Denied Rights

The United States Attorney declared yesterday that "every guaranteed right" was afforded Scott W. Fuller, 23, when he was jailed for four months without bail or a court hearing.

Prosecutor George Morris Fay made this statement in a formal answer to a motion to dismiss the indictment filed April 18 against Fuller, who still remains in District Jail as a suspect in a $120 theft.

Fay's answer, however, failed to shed any light on circumstances surrounding the tention of Fuller since he was brought here in December from his home State of North Carolina.

To Report on Inquiry

Fay has promised to report to District Court on May 4 results of an investigation he has ordered conducted into the Fuller case.

Meanwhile, the judges of District Court have directed the United States marshal to notify them whenever a prisoner is brought to the jail here from another jurisdiction. The action was taken to prevent any more "forgotten" prisoners like Fuller.

Fay's answer, in which Assistant United States Attorney Richard Roberts joined, declared Fuller was arrested on a warrant issued for "probable cause" and was afforded opportunity to have a hearing before a United States Commissioner in North Carolina. Fuller waived this hearing, the document stated.

Says Many Facts False

"Many of the facts alleged in the 'so-called' points of authorities in support of defendant's (Fuller's) motion to dismiss the indictment are not the truth. At the proper time, the Government shall expect these allegations of the defendant to be proved and will welcome the chance to present the true facts to the court," it said.

Priest 'Sure' Mental Health Funds Will Be Voted for Year

The author of the National Mental Health Act of 1946 feels sure that Congress will provide the money necessary to carry on the Government's role in fighting mental illness another year.

Representative J. Percy Priest (D., Tenn.) gave this assurance last night at a public rally sponsored by the newly formed Mental Hygiene Society of the National Capital Area in the District Building boardroom.

Although the Senate ordered a 5 per cent cut Thursday in all reducible appropriations for the Labor Department and Federal Security Agency, Priest said he was confident that in conference the two houses would substantially stand by the original House requests.

Of $11,612,000 approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee for mental health activities under FSA, $750,000 is earmarked for research and training grants already under the mental health act. Another $2,150,000 would be available for new grants. The remainder is for such items as aid to States and support of the National Mental Health Advisory Committee.

Pointing to the benefits thus far realized under the act, Priest said 24 of the States, including the District, have taken Federal grants for mental health work and 22 others have expanded existing agencies.

Priest reminded the gathering—on the eve of the closing of Mental Health Week—that mental health is still a major problem, despite the advances made under the act. He said 1 of every 10 persons is in one way or another mentally ill, and 600,000 are in hospital beds with psychic disorders.

Formation of the District's Mental Hygiene Society April 8 was spearheaded by the local Junior Chamber of Commerce. The new group's first vice chairman, Charles G. Bogan, jr., presided last night. Among others heard were James V. Bennett, director of the Bureau of Prisons, and Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, the District's assistant health officer.

Safeway Clerks Granted Salary Boost of $4.50

A contract granting pay increases of $4.50 weekly to 900 full-time clerks of Safeway Stores in Greater Washington has been agreed upon by union and management, it was announced yesterday.

The contract was accepted at a membership meeting of Local 639-A, Retail Clerks Union (AFL), in Turner's Arena Thursday night. Negotiations had begun last March and the old contract expired April 1.

Under the new contract the 250 part-time employes receive a 10-cent-an-hour increase making their wage range from $1.05 to $1.35 per hour.

The increase gives full-time employes a wage range of $45.50 to $59.50 a week.

Hope Knighted as Exalted Apple Polisher

Winchester, Va., April 29 (AP).—Bob Hope came to Winchester today to be knighted "Robert of Hope, Grand Exalted Apple Polisher of the World."

Miss Margret Thors, Queen of the twenty-second Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, gave the comedian a tap on the shoulder with an apple-tipped sword as he knelt on the steps of Handley High School.

"Is that all?" Hope asked. "Well, don't just stand there. Help me up."

The queen did and was rewarded with a kiss on the check.

"What's the name?" the comic inquired when told by Miss Thors that Bing Crosby ruled over the 1948 feature float parade.

Then he remembered.

"Oh, yes, my father."

Hope came here on a flying visit to act for a few hours as grand marshal of this afternoon's parade. He arrived here by plane at 10:15 a. m. to be greeted by Harry F. Byrd, jr., son of the United States Senator.

Then he was rushed to the pageant grounds to be knighted and to be greeted on behalf of Virginia by Lieut. Governor L. Preston Collins.

He also received a giant key which Winchester's mayor presented as "the key to our hearts."

Then after mugging for the big crowd, Bob left for luncheon with the queen. Afterwards he lined up with the scores of floats, drum and bugle corps and bands for the giant parade which climaxed the festival. Thousands lined the streets for miles to see the spectacle.

Ideal weather prevailed.

Winners in last night's torchlight and mummers parade in which fire department units from four States competed included:

Class B band, $100 prize, Terra Alta, W. Va., High School.

Best drum and bugle corps, prize, $100, Moose Drum and Bugle Corps, Hagerstown, Md.

A float entered by the Arnold Pen Co. of Petersburg took first prize tonight among the entries by commercial firms.

Virginia Tech's regimental cadet corps band won the top prize of $200 in a Class A band competition. The Class B band award went to Gary, W. Va., High School. Kelly Mansfield, Post 52, American Legion, was adjudged to have entered the best drum and bugle corps.

Franklin (Va.) High School had the best drum major and the Dundalk (Md.) company school drum and bugle corps showed the best majorette. Floats entered by the Elks and Lions Clubs of Winchester tied for first prize in the "artistic float" contest.

The parade was the real climax of the two-day Apple Blossom celebration. A giant ball honoring Queen Shenanhoah brought the annual festival to a formal close.

Area News in Brief

Fire in Northeast Dwelling Routs 24

Fire routed 24 persons yesterday from their two-story, six-room dwelling, destroying a first-floor room before being extinguished.

One of the occupants, Mrs. Rudolph Davis, said the blaze started when her 2-year-old daughter, Raynell, struck a match, setting fire to curtains. The room was occupied by Mrs. Davis, her husband and four children, she said.

Other residents of the house at 20 Myrtle st. ne., are Mrs. Davis' mother-in-law, Mrs. Marie Davis and the families of three of the elder Mrs. Davis' children. They are Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart and five children, Mr. and Mrs. Elcise Davis and one child, and John Davis and six children.

Housebreaking Solved

A series of Fairfax County housebreakings have been cleared up, county police said yesterday, with the arrest of two 20-year-old Herndon, Va., boys. Except for some other loot, police said, the youths' forays netted only $3.50 in cash.

The pair identified as Yoncie A. Bain and Robert I. Cockrill, was arrested Thursday night and admitted the following housebreakings in Herndon April 19, police said: Herndon Ice Plant, Fair-Vue Mills and a frozen custard store. Police said they also admitted breaking into a Chantilly hardware store April 22. They were held under $4000 bond each for hearing in Fairfax Trial Justice Court May 11.

Court Rules

It's Not Cruel To Swear Bit At Your Wife

Annapolis, Md., April 29 (AP).—It's not cruelty to swear at your wife or refuse to buy her a new dress every time she wants one, the Court of Appeals said today.

Refusing to grant a divorce for Mrs. Frances E. Eberwein of Baltimore, the high court listed a series of husbandly acts that "ordinarily" fall short of cruel treatment.

"Marital neglect, indifference, failure to provide as freely as the wife may desire in dress or convenience, sallies of passion, harshness, rudeness and use of profane and abusive language do not constitute cruelty as grounds for divorce," the court held.

"Only danger to life, limb or health will constitute such cruelty," Judge Stephen R. Collins wrote for the unanimous court.

"A single act of violence will ordinarily not justify a divorce on grounds of cruelty," he said.

Mrs. Eberwein said she was slapped by her husband, Frederick W. Eberwein, Army veteran, former Baltimore Postoffice clerk.

Charter Unit Has 5 Items For Council

The Montgomery charter committee last night disclosed five items which it will urge the Montgomery County Council to consider during its legislative session beginning Monday.

James J. Hayden, chairman of a special committee on county legislation of the charter committee, disclosed the items before more than 150 persons at a public hearing in the county courthouse, Rockville.

Hayden emphasized that the committee's board of directors, in approving the report, did not specifically recommend enactment into law of any of the matters puesented; that it merely wished to recommend "serious consideration of the facts and observations presented."

Proposals Listed

Recommended to the council for its consideration were the following items: (1) building code for the Regional District of the county, (2) zoning regulations in the Regional District, (3) trash and garbage collection, (4) the Juvenile Court act, and (5) nonpartisan election of the county council.

Prior to the charter committee's report, State Senator Roy Tasco Davis defended the legislative record of the all-Republican county delegation at the Maryland Assembly.

The delegation had "no wild ideas for the county," he said, "but we were protective and none of your rights was taken away."

Other members of the delegation attending the hearings were Delegates Mrs. Leona Rush, John R. Reeves, De Witt Hyde and R. Duncan Clark.

Liquor Concern Asks Dismissal Of Complaint

Middle Atlantic Distributors Inc., liquor wholesalers, yesterday asked the Federal Trade Commission to dismiss a complaint of violating the FTC Act by using unlawful agreements to fix retail prices.

The wholesaler-distributor of Hiram Walker liquor declared that evidence introduced by the Government in hearings held during March did not establish any violations charged, and that "there is no public interest to sustain the complaint."

In a brief accompanying the motion, Middle Atlantic asserts it has never desired to enter into agreements or understandings to compel retailers to resell products at specified resale prices.

A wholesaler-distributor may legally state prices at which he would like his products to be sold, and may refuse to sell any retailer if the latter fails to observe such resale prices, according to the brief. It is also asserted that there has been no evidence that any dealers were forced to sell at the specified prices.

The commission was asked to set a date for oral arguments on the motion. A separate motion asks that William R. Lichtenberg, secretary and a director of Middle Atlantic, be ruled out as a respondent on the ground that he has acted only as attorney for the company.

Maryland's Vote Intent Act Repeal Signed

Annapolis, Md., April 29 (AP).—Governor Lane today signed Maryland's 47-year-old Declaration of Intentions law out of existence.

He also put his signature on administration measures allowing 70 million dollars of State aid to Baltimore City and the counties for school construction.

The bills were among 254 which moved across the Governor's desk. He vetoed five, but approved the remainder.

Most of the measures affected county and city governments, but one extended out of State. It stamped Maryland's endorsement to a joint Virginia-Maryland Commission to regulate oystering in the Potomac River and fishing in both the river and Chesapeake Bay.

Virginia and Congress must still approve the bi-State authority before it may be established.

Law on Divorce Suits

Among the others were acts of the 1949 General Assembly which:

Authorize divorce suits when a husband or wife has served 18 months of a three-year felony conviction.

Set up a Maryland civil defense agency to meet "enemy attack, sabotage or natural disasters."

The declaration of intentions law required newcomers to declare they intend to become Maryland citizens a year before they vote.

Repeal of the law, which was unique to Maryland, does not alter the requirement that persons must have lived in the State a year before they vote.

Other bills signed included:

'Unlawful' Hookup

Hotel Pledges Change in Its Pool Pipeline

Ambassador Hotel swimming pool officials promised last night to install immediately a new surge tank and remove a water connection that Health Department officials term 'undesirable and unlawful."

The statement was made at the close of an all-day hearing by the District License Board on whether the pool license should be revoked for failure to remove the connection.

William Armstrong, pool manager, said materials and personnel for the project have been obtained and the work will go forward day and night.

The board heard testimony from several Health Department officials that the present connection between the District waterline and the pool system could result in used pool water pouring back into the District water system during a major fire, since protective valves are subject to failure.

E. Milton Dulin, assistant director of the District's Bureau of Public Health Engineering, said the pool management had been served with several notices that the connection should be removed, starting with December 30, 1942, but that because of wartime shortages of metals no pressure was exerted to make the repairs immediately.

Train Bandits' Captors Given Honor Awards

Last month, in the best traditions of the early West, two armed men held up a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train near Martinsburg, W. Va.

Their adventure ended 12 hours later in a pawnbrokers' exchange at 2157 Pennsylvania ave. nw., when they were captured by two alert Washington policemen.

For that capture, Pvts. James D. Kennedy and Elwood G. Lomax yesterday were honored as policemen of the month. Eeach received an award of merit medal and a certificate.

The presentation ceremony took place in a B. & O. dining car on track 20 at Union Station. It wasn't the same dining car in which the two bandits started their fantastic robbery, but it was a near replica.

Lieut. Edgar E. Scott, head of the robbery squad, who had directed the search for the two gunmen to the neighborhood in which they were caught, did not share in the award, but was singled out for special commendation.

The train robbers, Luman Ramsdell, 23, and George B. Ashton, 20, were surprised in the pawnbrokers' exchange by Kennedy and Lomax on the morning of March 10, about 12 hours after the robbery.

Ramsdell tried to shoot it out. Lomax shot him in the chest. Ashton surrendered without a struggle. Ramsdell recovered and both pleaded guilty. Kennedy and Lomax were advanced to the status of plainclothesmen.

Inspector Floyd E. Truscott acted as master of ceremonies at yesterday's award luncheon and introduced Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, who pinned the award of merit medals on Kennedy and Lomax.

White House Aides Hosts At Colorful Reception

By Marie McNair

THE RECEPTION yesterday at Anderson House was something new in the way of Washington parties.

Hosts were 24 bachelors—young and handsome White House Aides. Top guests were President and Mrs. Truman, and among the 200 or more who'd been invited were big names in Government, and a group of pretty girls, with whom the aides have had pleasant associations during the year

The White House aides, selected from the three branches of the service, are a personable lot, who perform their duties at the White House in addition to their regular tasks. They're there on all official occassions, such as dinners, teas and receptions; must be polite and gallant, at all times.

Senior aide is Col. Don Lowry, who's been bossing the boys at the Executive Mansion seven years Then there's Comdr. Jesse Gay, Col. Godfrey T. McHugh; Lieut Col. Leo E. Fielder, Lieut. Col. Albert L. Cox, jr., Maj. Harmon P. Rimmer, Maj. William M. Zimmerman, Maj. Edward L. Wilson, Maj. Lewis N. Ellis, Lieut. Comdr. Martin J. Mulderrig, jr., Lieut. Comdr. Robert W. Rayler, jr., Maj. Jack Preston Love, Maj. Francis W. Smith, Capt. Adam J. Eisenhauer, Capt. John J. O'Donnell, Lieut. Hoye D. Moore, Lieut. Albert P. Carpenter, Capt. Ralph E. Talley, Capt. Jack D. Johnson, Lieut. George W. Williams, Capt. Robert S. Rivers, Lieut. William H. Lanagan, Lieut. Henry J. Hughes, jr., and Lieut. Edward S. Saxby.

President and Mrs. Truman stayed more than an hour on the terrace at Anderson House. Mrs. Truman wore a navy blue frock and a mink jacket to ward off late afternoon breezes. Her hat of palest pink straw had a rolled brim filled in the front with tiny white blossoms and deep pink flowers.

The President, in a blue suit, smiled continously as one friend after another came up to chat. The Chief Justice, Fred Vinson, and Mrs. Vinson, wearing navy blue with a natural straw hat trimmed in blue veiling, joined the circle.

Gen. Albert Cox exchanged pleasantries, and others coming up from time to time were the Attorney General and Mrs. Tom Clark, the Secretary of the Treasury, John W. Snyder, and his daughter, Drucie, who told me her mother was kept at home because her twisted ankle refuses to mend. Margaret Truman was on the sick list, too, after coming down from New York just for the event.

The Postmaster General and Mrs. Jesse Donaldson were there, and Agriculture's Secretary, Charles Brannan, with Mrs. Brannan, done up in rose beige and brown, and Mrs. Julius Krug, wife of the Secretary of the Interior with field flowers on her natural colored straw hat.

Mrs. Stuart Symington, pretty wife of the Secretary of the Air Force, wore elephant gray faille taffeta. Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg, and her husband, Chief of Staff of the Air Force, were a good-looking couple, Mrs. Vandenberg in navy blue, the General in Air Force blue with strings of decorations pinned to his tunic.

The Air Force string orchestra played from a balcony where an almost life-sized portrait of the late Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, who gave their mansion to the Society of the Cincinnati, covered the wall behind them.

Service Group There

Acting Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Gordon Gray were there and the Under Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Arthur S. Barrows, the Assistant Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Tracy Voorhees, the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Eugene Zuckert.

Chatted with Gen. and Mrs. Wade Haislip, Mrs. Louis Denfeld, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations, who wore violets on her pale lavender hat and fragrant purple lilacs pinned to her coat.

Admiral James Foskett, former Naval Aide to President Truman, was down from Philadelphia to go to the party with Mrs. Foskett. The Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Clifton Cates, Major Gen. and Mrs. Harry Vaughan—he's the President's Military Aide, were there.

Then there were the Clark Clifords and their daughter Jerry, who's as tall as her father and just as good-looking; Mrs. Max Truitt, who wore no hat, but a fur jacket over her dark blue frock; Col. Horace Smith—he used to be a White House aide—with Mrs. Smith and her daughter, Virginia Summerlin.

Jane Lingo seemed to know all her hosts; so did Dorothy Dyer, whose sister, Elenite, married one—Col. Jim Batte—who's now in Boston. Among the other younger guests were Letitia Knox, Sally Reed, Harriet Johnston, Frances Dear, Dorothy Parker, Emelyn Knowland, Helen Lanagan, Mme. Mimi Heyne, Margaret Kane, Clare Foster, Bernice Pharr, Elaine LeFevre, Betty Crews, Shelia Green, Roxelene Talley and Pat Bauman.

The Texans' Big Affair and Square

By Nicha Soure

"SWING that girl, that pretty little girl, that little gal behind you."

Yessir, folks, put on plaid shirts and gingham dresses for that real Texas-style square dance tonight at the Shoreham Hotel.

The square dancing fad has been taking like mad in Texas of late and the transplanted Texans in the Capital are learning it. Over in Arlington and Chevy Chase, groups of Texans have been meeting around in private recreation rooms to practice.

With so many "finished" square dancers, ballroom dancing probably will not be too popular but the Texas State Society still promises a bit of it for the "city slickers."

In order that Texans may get to know one another better, a miniature square dancer will be pinned on him giving name and home town as he enters the door.

Many Groups Join New York Dance Cruise May 6

How Maryland Solves Its Own Health Problems Without Waiting for Federal Aid

Starting Sunday, May 1st, in THE POST

While other States and communities sit back waiting for aid and guidance from Washington, the State of Maryland and the City of Baltimore have gone ahead boldly with health programs of their own. And the plan works! Doctors like its absence of red tape and its lack of compulsion. Patients like the medical service they are getting. Taxpayers appreciate the low cost. In fact, the pioneering in Maryland may well serve as an example to the Nation.

So reports Agnes E. Meyer, in a series of articles starting on Sunday, May 1, in The Washington Post. Mrs. Meyer, nationally known for her interest in health problems, and a vigorous opponent of compulsory health insurance, made an exhaustive study of the Maryland Plan, both in Baltimore and in the counties. She reports with enthusiasm on this wholly American program, urges that it be studied with care by those who tend to look to other countries for their social ideas.

Everyone interested in medical care—and that means every parent and every taxpayer in particular—will find these Washington Post articles well worth reading. Start them in Sunday's Post.

About Remodeling An Aluminum Pan

I have an aluminum pan no longer usable as a double boiler or saucepan, but which could be remodeled into a casserole for my pressure cooker by cutting off the top and adding a removable bail. Do you know if anyone would do that, or if I could do it in the "fix-it shop?"
R. R. I.

The firms listed under "tinners" in the yellow pages of the telephone book have the equipment necessary to cut the pan, and a small neighborhood shop probably would be willing to do the small job for you. I know of no "fix-it" shop which has the equipment to do this work yourself.

In my small kitchen there is no place for an electric mixer, but I could make a place in a small homemade cupboard if I could find a mechanism such as is used in secretarial desks for lifting the typewriter as it is pulled out of the desk. Do you know the name of the mechanism and where one could be bought?
R. R. L.

This piece of mechanism is called the drop-head mechanism for a typewriter desk. There is a good possibility that you can get it if you will contact firms which sell used office equipment. I am told that this mechanism from typewriter desks which have been damaged can be purchased for only a few dollars. I suggest you call some of the firms listed under "Office Furniture" in the yellow pages of the telephone book. They may be able to supply you with this part.

I would like to make, or have made from parts cut and ready to assemble some pieces of unfinished furniture in dimensions not obtainable in stores. Does any firm here make up the patterns and cut wood to make furniture, starting with only the outside dimensions and general description of the article desired?
R. R. L.

There is a shop on Connecticut ave. which will make up pieces of unfinished furniture to your order. For further information, I suggest you call the shop at Sterling 5548. This same shop will send you a catalogue without cost, showing the style and prices of the many pieces of unfinished furniture they have in stock. Included in the catalogue are complete directions for finishing the furniture. To get the catalogue, call the above Sterling number and leave your name and address.

I am tooling some copper foil and would like using this for table lamps. Does anyone in town make wooden bases to specifications which would be suitable for covering with copper.
A. B. R.

There is a lamp shop on G st., which can supply you immediately with square wooden bases. If the base would need to be done on a lathe, they can provide you with one of these some time in the near future. For further information, I suggest you discuss it with the firm at National 0140.

For the benefit of the reader who inquired about classes in the silk screen process, these are given at a craft shop in the 1600 block of Wisconsin ave. nw. The course consists of nine 2-hour weekly sessions and all materials are furnished by the shop. The telephone number is Dupont 6607.
P. E. G.

With three small children and a house full of inconveniences, I am interested in making, or having made, a few articles to help in shortcutting the housework. First, I would like to find someone in Washington or Alexandria who makes articles of plastic. I am interested in a wall panel of oblique pegs for draining deep glassware and bottles, similar to the wooden ones used in laboratories. I am also interested in some long-handled measuring spoons for reaching into deep packages and for pouring such foods as farina into boiling water without steaming the hands.
R. R. L.

I have not been suecessful in finding a firm which can make the wall panel of plastic for you. However, a laboratory equipment supply house, Arthur H. Thomas Co., West Washington Square, Philadelphia, Pa. sells test tube support wall panels in wood and may be able to supply them in plastic. I suggest you write them for information, giving an exact description of the board you wish.

The only suggestion I have for you to get the long-handled measuring spoons is to contact a hobby shop which stocks all kinds of plastics and has the equipment for working with them. The manager of this shop has said that they do not have any way to make a standard measuring spoon, but there is a possibility they can fasten a long handle onto a commercially made short-handled measuring spoon. To discuss the problem with him, call him at Sterling 0783.

Let Russians Visit U. S., Says Mrs. Roosevelt

Hollywood, Fla., April 29 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today the United States should take definite steps to show the world that democracy has more to offer than communism.

She suggested the United States let down the barriers and permit a few people from Russia and the satellite countries to enter under visitor's permits.

She told a news conference, prior to addressing the General Federation of Women's Clubs, she did not think many would come from Russia but some might from the satellites.

"They probably wouldn't dare go back and tell the truth, but they would have seen something of democratic life," she said.

Later at the federation banquet Mrs. Roosevelt reiterated her contention that the United States should allow visitors from Russia and its satellites into the country.

"Russia is closed to the world," she said. "The United States is open—its failures as well as successes are known. Russians say everything is perfect in Russia. Many don't believe this, but they are told what to say.

"I would like to see us so strong and sure of the moral things of democracy that a few visitors from Communist lands could offer us no threat."

Mrs. Roosevelt said the day will come when Russians may be convinced that we and our feeling and belief in democracy is so strong that "there will be a compromise."

"We see some steps in the right direction," she added.

"There was a time when the United States could do what it pleased and it was nobody's business. Now we spearhead the leadership of democracy—if we fail in leadership we will lose the battle to communism."

Mrs. Roosevelt said Russian officials attending United Nations meetings were "under the strictest discipline and all are terribly afraid."

"When they go home they tell what they think they are expected to tell," Mrs. Roosevelt said.

She added there was always a chance that when some of the visitors returned "they might tell something of American life . . . when they were behind closed doors and knew nobody was listening."

Round-the-World Items

Colorful Collection Shown At Congressional Hobby Show

By Genevieve Reynolds

ANTIQUE snuff boxes . . . minute glass slippers . . . priceless laces . . . exquisite tortoise shell fans . . . rare shawls . . . hand-painted tally cards . . . valuable silver and glass . . . bracelets and cookbooks. All these and more were exhibited at the Congressional Club's annual hobby show yesterday at 2001 New Hampshire ave. nw.

A look-see at the various collections of club members was equivalent to a stay-at-home-round-the-world junket.

Mrs. Edward Bartlett, wife of the Alaskan Delegate, had on display a group of objects made of Eskimo ivory. In one corner of the club's Hawaiian room were dozens of Hawaiian plants, books, orchids and native handicrafts, exhibited by Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, wife of the Hawaiian Delegate.

An interesting array of bracelets, garnered by Mrs. Mike Mansfield, wife of the Montana Representative, from Peru, Mexico, Tripoli, Iran and other foreign ports, was one of several interesting jewelry exhibits. Among the antique jewelry items in the exhibit of Mrs. Richard Bolling, wife of the Missouri Representative, is a Russian ikon, which predates the known Russian language.

Mrs. John C. Kunkel, wife of the Pennsylvania Representative, displayed a beautiful old family heirloom wedding dress, made of ivory satin rosepoint and duchess lace.

Eye catchers were old snuff boxes in Mrs. Richard B. Wigglesworth's collection; Chinese jade bottles exhibited by Mrs. E. T. Miller of Maryland; colored satin glassware shown by Mrs. James J. Polk of Ohio; a priceless collection of antique China owned by Mrs. Joseph A. Herbert, jr.; needlepoint pictures and pocketbooks made by Mrs. Aime J. Forand.

Mrs. John Davis Lodge showed a collection of Italian dolls, each dressed in a colorful costume of the various provinces in Italy.

Attracting much comment and attention was a handsome silver tray exhibited by Mrs. Edward E. Gann. The tray was presented to her brother, the late Vice President Curtis, by his colleagues in the Senate in 1933. Inscribed on the tray are such well known names as Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Senator Carl Hayden, Senator Kenneth McKellar, Vice President Alben Barkley. Only feminine name in the tray is that of Mrs. Hattie Carraway, first woman Senator.

Handsome fans from Brussels, France, black tortoise shell from Russia, varied types of tortoise shell from the Marianas Islands were seen in the collection of Mrs. Ross A. Collins of Mississippi.

One of the most spectacular exhibits was that of Mrs. Maurice Thatcher which included embroidered Chinese Mandarin coats, Spanish lace shawls, Panamanian jewelry, a necklace from Jerusalem made of crysolite stones.

Miss Henderson, Schoolmates Here

ARTISTIC Mrs. Clinton McKinnon (left), wife of the California Representative, displays an anniversary candle, which will last for 10 years burning at the rate of one inch an hour, to Mrs. Homer Thornberry, wife of the Texas Representative. A few moments later there was a loud shreik. The box contained a dead cat, which the driver of the car had taken with her to dispose of.

In the Park

I wandered in the park today . . . And every shade was green . . . The gentle grass, the trees and all . . . The bushes in between . . . I felt the innocence of spring . . . When things begin to grow . . . And I forgot the wilder wind . . . That whirled around the snow . . . The warbling of a thousand birds . . . Enchanted all the air . . . And everything was peaceful and . . . Perfection everywhere . . . And then I could not help but think . . . What fools we are today . . . to strive for wealth and prominence . . . And just to laugh and play . . . When God has given us the world . . . All the stars above . . . And all He ever wants from us . . . Is everlasting love.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

No Wonder Our Forests Are Disappearing

M. O. Coleman of 520 7th st. se. has learned something new about trees from one of our afternoon contemporaries, which recently carried this item:

"After a heavy snow, there is usually an open place around each tree because the tree reflects sunlight and thus melts."

Pretty tough on the trees, isn't it?

THIS IS WASHINGTON

He was walking through the Statler lobby, and trying to stuff a big wad of money into his pocket. In the process, the money dropped to the floor.

An Air Force sergeant, close behind, picked up the roll of bills and was about to hand it over to its owner—when a look of pleased recognition came into his eyes.

"Well, well," said the soldier. "I haven't seen you since the war days in England."

"Yes," stammered the other as he reached out for his money. "Thanks for picking it up."

"Not so fast," counseled the sergeant. "What about the 200 dollars you borrowed and never paid back?"

"I can't really spare it right now," countered the other, with mounting embarrassment. "Maybe next week . . . Yes, I'm sure that next week I can . . ."

The sergeant smiled. He peeled two 100-dollar bills off the roll, stuffed them in his pocket, and then handed over the remainder of the money.

"Right now is much better than next week," he said sweetly. "Nice to have seen you again."

"Yeah," muttered the deadbeat. "It's been peachy."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two lively, friendly kittens, very bright." (Lincoln 7971.)

"Gentle dog, loves children. Manager of our apartment says she must go." (Adams 8137.)

MISCELLANY

The furniture store at the corner of Georgia and Missouri aves. displays a sign offering "Fridgidaires" for sale—presumably with no extra charge for the additional "d" . . . Al Friendly, on leave from The Washington Post's front page, is back in town for a brief visit. He'll return to his ECA job in Paris just as soon as he explains to all his friends that he's not really getting fatter—his trousers just seem to be getting tighter . . . District Liners returning from Winchester report that the Festival should have been held a few weeks earlier, when the blossoms were at their best . . . J. M. G. has a good word to say about the courtesy of "Capital Transit's Operator No. 2990," who turns out to be Joseph L. Miller of 2221 Hall pl. nw. . . . And an almost identical report from Mrs. Charles E. Hartel of 1437 Rhode Island ave. nw. commends "Bus Driver 1197," who is listed on the records as Leonard J. Beeker of 1121 24th st. nw. . . . L. Krause of 4119 18th pl. ne. is embarrassed because when she spoke up for her carrier boy, she called him "Pat Ryan" instead of Pat Adams, which is really his name . . . That's nothing; I wish I had a dollar for every time a name gets mixed up. I'll never forget the time John L. Lewis introduced Business Analyst Joe Livingston as "Joe Stanley."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Change Jim Chism's name to mine, and his story is a page from my past. If my memory hasn't stripped a gear after three years, these are the steps I took to lend a hand to the buyer of my car:

1. Drove car to inspection station and parked it.
2. Took the title (by cab) to the license bureau.
3. Transferred the title to the buyer, thereby "killing" the tags on the car.
4. Presented the title in the buyer's name.
5. Received application blank for new tags; deposited money to pay for them with the bureau.
6. Took the proper card back to the inspection station (by cab) and offered the car for inspection.
7. Returned to the license bureau (by cab) with the okayed card and exchanged it for new plates.
8. Returned to inspection station (by cab) and got the car cleared.
9. Drove to the nearest bar.

Gerald E. Roberts,
4101 Minnesota ave. ne.

Dear Gerald:

I'm glad to see that Jim's position is merely difficult—not insoluble.

But anybody who contemplates using this technique is reminded that in Step 6 there is a danger that the inspection station will refuse to pass the car.

For example, if the tail light doesn't work — you're stuck. You can't move a car with dead tags.

Therefore it appears to me the only safe course is: Don't sell your used car. When it gets dusty, throw it away. Bill

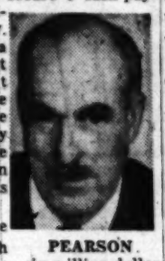
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Waltham Gets RFC Aide With Aid

By Drew Pearson

One of the worst Washington lobbying rackets is to get a job with the Government, then use it as a springboard to secure a lush-paying job in private industry. Sometimes a Government official almost seems to be working for the private company with which he wants a job even before he gets the job.



PEARSON

Recently the Waltham Watch Co. received a six-million-dollar loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. At the very same time, Waltham hired one of the chief RFC officials who helped arrange the loan—John Hagerty, head of the RFC's Boston office.

Hagerty knows nothing of watchmaking or selling; is a political protege of former Senator Dave Walsh. But he handled the preliminary work for the Waltham loan, recommending it to the RFC in Washington. He was then getting a Government salary of $10,000. But the minute Waltham got the loan, Hagerty left the RFC and went to work for Waltham at a salary of $30,000.

Query: Did Waltham offer the lush salary to Hagerty because he deserved it, or as a reward for helping swing the RFC loan?

Another RFC Loan

Again, the RFC has given a three-million-dollar loan to the Plywood Plastics Corp., of Hampton, S. C. One of the RFC officials who helped arrange it was Sterling Foster.

And now Foster has notified the RFC that he intends to go to work soon for the Plywood Plastics, the same company which borrowed three million dollars. Foster will just about double his salary, getting $18,000 the first year, and $22,000 by the third year.

Again query: Was this a reward for help in arranging the loan?

The Treasury's Internal Revenue Bureau long ago got around this problem by refusing to let any of its retired personnel practice before the bureau until two years after resigning. But other Government departments are lax, especially the Army and Navy.

One of the worst scandals in Washington is the number of high-ranking Army and Navy officers now working for private industry in order to handle procurement contracts with the Army and Navy. Many of them still draw pensions from the United States Government, plus income-tax curtailments, in addition to their lush private industry salaries.

New Judge Baldwin

Senator Ray Baldwin's acceptance of a Supreme Court judgeship in Connecticut illustrates a point which many people don't realize—the wear and tear to which we subject our public servants.

Senator Baldwin has been active in Connecticut politics for 29 years—a long time in any man's life. During that period he was subjected to the expense and the physical drain of running for Statewide office in five elections in 10 years. In other words, he ran for Governor or Senator an average of every two years.

During his 29 years in public office a quirk of fate made it such that no Republican Governor was elected in office at the right time to appoint him to the State Supreme Court—long Baldwin's chief ambition. Either Baldwin was Governor and couldn't appoint himself, or a Democrat was Governor and would appoint him.

So, the other day, Gov. Chester Bowles, hearing of Baldwin's lifelong ambition, offered him appointment to the Suppreme Court, and the Senator naturally accepted. He will not take office until December by which time most major legislative matters will have been decided.

Note: Several years ago, Herbert Hoover, sizing up Republican presidential timber, described Baldwin as the ablest Governor in Republican ranks. As a Senator he has also lived up to this appraisal.

Aid to ducation

Federal aid to education, which was blocked in the Eightieth Congress, is now pretty well set to roll through Congress—provided the Catholic Church gives its blessing.

In the past, the Catholics have put up a fight because religious schools are not included in the program. But Senate Labor Chairman Elbert Thomas of Utah has taken steps to obtain Catholic cooperation and thus assure smooth sailing for the bill.

Thomas's first move was to invite two Catholics—Senators Howard McGrath of Rhode Island and James Murray of Montana—to join in sponsoring the bill. They warned, however, that if the Catholic hierarchy took a stand against the bill, they would have to reverse themselves.

Although Thomas did not include parochial schools in the bill because of the constitutional divorcement of church and state, he tried to woo Catholic support by proposing that parochial schools be included in a Federal health program for school children.

Senators Brien McMahon of Connecticut and Ed Johnson of Colorado promptly offered an amendment which would make health benefits available to parochial schools as part of the aid-to-education bill. But Thomas, wary of linking church schools with the education bill in any way, proposed a separate bill instead. This would authorize 35 million dollars for health benefits for both public and parochial schools.

Thomas now hopes to push both bills through Congress at the same time, appeasing the Catholics with the health bill and those against Federal aid to parochial schools with the other bill.
